
ACF brings a two-generation philosophy to its efforts, and works to support and advance two-generation approaches through its research, technical assistance, and program and policy guidance.

ACF IS COMMITTED TO

- identifying opportunities to apply these principles to programs we administer
- identifying the best ways to support their adoption in state, tribal, and local efforts
- advancing a research agenda that will enhance our understanding of effective two-generation approaches and their impacts for children, parents, and families

WE PROMOTE AND SUPPORT

- linkages between high quality educational services for children and workforce development services for their parents
- programmatic efforts to help parents gain the skills, knowledge, and resources to support their child’s development
- ensuring that families have access to the economic and social supports needed for stability and resilience and healthy child development
- helping families build social capital that can support both resilience and upward mobility
