EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA) funds core crisis and intervention services to enhance the physical and emotional safety of survivors¹ of domestic violence and dating violence and their families. A comprehensive network of community-based emergency shelters and non-residential services programs offers immediate crisis response, confidential temporary refuge, ongoing safety planning, options counseling, legal assistance, individual and systems advocacy, supportive counseling, and psychoeducational support groups for adults, youth, and children. All FVPSA-funded programs strive to stop violence before it starts and to ensure children grow up in safe and healthy homes. Each state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands have a federally-recognized Domestic Violence Coalition. This report provides an overview of the nationwide network of direct intervention and prevention services offered by FVPSA-funded programs in fiscal years FY 2013 and FY 2014.

The Department of Health and Human Services' (HHS) Administration for Children and Families (ACF) administers FVPSA through the Family and Youth Services Bureau (FYSB) in the Administration on Children, Youth and Families (ACYF). FVPSA is the primary federal funding stream supporting immediate shelter and non-residential supportive services for adult and youth survivors of family violence, domestic violence, and dating violence and their children. Originally enacted in 1984, FVPSA received an appropriation of $121.2 million in FY 2013 and $133.5 million in FY 2014. The National Domestic Violence Hotline received an appropriation of $3.04 million in FY 2013 and $4.50 million in FY 2014.

- In FY 2013 and FY 2014, FVPSA formula grants to states, territories and tribes totaled $203,760,000.
- In FY 2014, FVPSA's core funding supported over 1,250 domestic violence shelter programs, 257 domestic violence non-shelter programs, and 137 Tribal domestic violence grants.
- Local domestic violence programs provided immediate shelter and supportive services to 1,346,228 adult victims of domestic violence and 120,452 children or youth in FY 2013 and 1,277,836 adult victims and 114,573 children or youth in FY 2014.
- Domestic violence programs provided a total of 8.2 million shelter nights for victims and their families in FY 2013 and FY 2014. The average number of nights that victims stayed in shelter increased from 30 nights in FY 2012 to 33 nights in FY 2014. Anecdotal reports from programs indicate that clients staying in shelters may remain longer due to more complex needs and the lack of affordable housing.
- FVPSA-funded programs reported 186,558 unmet requests for shelter in FY 2013 and 196,467 unmet requests for shelter in FY 2014. This number is a count of the number of unmet shelter requests because programs were at capacity.

¹ The terms "victim", "survivor", and "victim and survivor" will be used interchangeably throughout this report. Use of the term "survivor" acknowledges and honors the reality that many victims of domestic violence, dating violence, and family violence have escaped horrific forms of abuse and coercion, while use of the term "victim" acknowledges that many individuals continue to suffer from intimate partner violence. Using the terms together denotes the complexity of ending domestic violence, dating violence, and family violence. Using the terms in this way is consistent with language used broadly throughout the field of domestic violence victim advocacy.

- State and tribal sub-grantees responded to more than 2.7 million crisis calls in FY 2013 and almost 2.6 million crisis calls in FY 2014. These calls could include victims calling for crisis counseling, shelter services or other support services, but exclude calls to the National Domestic Violence Hotline.
- The National Domestic Violence Hotline provides both life-saving and life-affirming assistance to survivors of domestic violence and other callers seeking help. The Hotline received 248,530 calls for information and assistance in FY 2013 and 266,615 calls in FY 2014.
- Local domestic violence programs offer ongoing community education to the general public. Workshops to community or tribal leaders or training for health professionals are representative of conducted activities. In FY 2013, 86,173 training presentations were conducted for 2.3 million people. In FY 2014, 112,710 training presentations were conducted for 2.4 million people.
- Local domestic violence programs regularly participate in events that increase public awareness and promote outreach to victims. Grantee focus groups revealed that due to adverse economic impacts on programs, and the resulting funding cuts experienced by many, the accompanying outreach and public awareness staffing reductions negatively affected the public's awareness of services available, likely reducing calls for support and assistance. In FY 2013 and FY 2014, respectively, 242,507 and 122,113 public awareness events were held nationwide by FVPSA-supported programs.
- Local domestic violence programs also provide presentations to children and youth about domestic violence, dating violence, healthy relationships and available services for victims; 2,455,136 children and youth attended such presentations in FY 2013, and 2,179,625 attended in FY 2014.
- State Domestic Violence Coalitions developed and implemented collaborative intervention and prevention activities with public agencies and other service providers within their respective states.
- A network of nine national resource centers and culturally-specific institutes provided comprehensive information, training, and technical assistance to inform, coordinate, and strengthen public and private efforts to address domestic and dating violence.
- FVPSA discretionary grants improved the effectiveness of services and explored new approaches to address and prevent domestic violence by: providing comprehensive strategies for children exposed to domestic violence; building collaborations between domestic violence programs and child welfare agencies, health care providers, runaway and homeless youth programs, and other relevant programs; enhancing leadership opportunities for underrepresented populations in the domestic violence field; building the capacity of both "mainstream" domestic violence organizations and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and questioning (LGBTQ) organizations to more effectively identify and address the unique needs of LGBTQ victims of intimate partner violence; and supporting culturally-specific community-based organizations to expand their existing programs to incorporate trauma-informed services for adults and children impacted by domestic violence.

Additionally, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) Domestic Violence Prevention Enhancements and Leadership through Alliances (DELTA) Program implemented and evaluated strategies to prevent first-time victimization and perpetration of intimate partner violence in ten states. The DELTA Program, which is funded through CDC, received $5.13 million in FY 2013 and $5.20 million in FY 2014 in FVPSA funds.²

Multi-faceted FVPSA efforts resulted in:

- Collaborative, innovative service delivery models;
- Partnerships with other federal, state and tribal agencies; and
- A solid network of training and technical assistance resources to advance the field.

Ongoing challenges related to recovery from the economic downturn continued to adversely impact domestic violence survivors and the programs that serve them. Financial instability can exacerbate abuse if both victims and perpetrators have few monetary resources and limited economic opportunities. Food insecurity, job loss, eviction, foreclosure, and other economic stressors, in particular, may contribute to violence or make it difficult, if not impossible, for a victim to safely leave an abuser. Couples who report high levels of financial strain also report rates of violence more than three times that of couples with low levels of financial strain.³ FVPSA programs provide critical services that help survivors move toward economic independence and economic stability.

Shelters are on the front lines in providing these essential supports for survivors who have few, if any, resources and frequently nowhere else to turn.⁴ An 11 percent cut in FVPSA funding, as a result of sequestration in FY 2013 (appeared as a reduction in appropriations from $129,547,000 in FY 2012 to $121,200,000 in FY 2013), coupled with reduced private donations as a result of the recession, made it extremely challenging for programs to fully respond to the growing need for emergency services and crisis intervention.

² FVPSA statute (42 USC § 10414) authorizes the Domestic Violence Prevention Enhancements and Leadership Through Alliances (DELTA) initiatives through cooperative agreements with state domestic violence coalitions, administered by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's (CDC) National Center for Injury Prevention and Control, via a separate line item appropriation.

I. THE NEED FOR FVPSA-FUNDED SERVICES

Survivor Story: Oklahoma

“A mother and her two children were being victimized by their father, who was on meth and chasing them with an axe. The victim called the police but they did not assist her. They instructed them to go lay down given that he lived there as well. They lived in fear for the remainder of the night and later escaped to emergency shelter. Since being in shelter, the children have been in counseling, changed schools successfully. The mother has been approved for housing and obtained a job within the first week of their being there.”

Domestic violence and dating violence are complex and pervasive social and public health problems with devastating consequences for adult and youth victims,⁵ and significant costs for individuals, communities and society.

Unless otherwise noted, data in the following section is from The National Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Survey (NISVS): 2010 Summary Report, published in 2011.⁶

Prevalence

- Each year, approximately twelve million people in the United States (U.S.) experience intimate partner violence.
- More than 1 in 3 women in the U.S. (35.6 percent or approximately 42.4 million) have experienced rape, physical violence, and/or stalking by an intimate partner at some point in her lifetime.
- More than half of women (51 percent) who have experienced rape in their lifetime report the perpetrators were current or former intimate partners.
- Sixty-nine percent of women and 53 percent of men who have experienced intimate partner violence in their lifetimes first experienced abuse before the age of 25.
- Nationwide, 1 in 6 women and 1 in 19 men have experienced stalking at some point in their lives, having felt very fearful or believed that they or someone close to them would be harmed or killed; 66.2 percent of female and 41.4 percent of male stalking victims report being stalked by a current or former intimate partner.
- Four in 10 lesbian women (43.8 percent) and 6 in 10 bisexual women (61.1 percent) reported experiencing rape, physical violence, and/or stalking within the context of an intimate partner relationship at least once during their lifetime.⁷

- Approximately 1 in 4 gay men (26 percent) and 4 in 10 bisexual men (37.3 percent) reported experiencing rape, physical violence, and/or stalking by an intimate partner during their lifetime.⁸
- More than 4 out of every 10 American Indian or Alaska Native women (46 percent) and 1 in 2 multiracial non-Hispanic women (53.8 percent) have been the victim of rape, physical violence, and/or stalking by an intimate partner in their lifetime.⁹

Children & Youth

- In 2011, 1 out of 15, or approximately 5 million children, witnessed physical intimate partner violence in the U.S.¹⁰ Throughout childhood, it is estimated that 25.6 percent, or approximately 19.4 million children, witness domestic violence in their homes.¹¹
- Thirty-one percent, or nearly one in three children who witnessed intimate partner violence, also reported being physically abused.¹²
- Research finds that children who witness domestic violence are at greater risk of developing psychiatric disorders, developmental problems, school failure, committing violence against others, and are at risk of low self-esteem.¹³
- A 2012 study in the Journal of Adolescent Health notes that exposure to child maltreatment, specifically sexual abuse, among young men has been linked to higher rates of involvement in a teen pregnancy than among their non-abused peers.¹⁴
- One in three high school girls who have been abused by a boyfriend has become pregnant. Being physically and sexually abused leaves teen-aged girls up to six times more likely to become pregnant.¹⁵

Health Consequences

- In addition to the immediate effects of intimate partner violence, such as injury and death, there are other health consequences, many with long-term impacts, including sexually transmitted infections (STIs), pelvic inflammatory disease, and unintended pregnancy.¹⁶
- Individuals experiencing intimate partner violence often develop chronic mental health conditions, such as depression, post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), anxiety disorders, substance abuse, and suicidal behavior.¹⁷ According to the CDC, 63 percent of female victims of intimate partner violence have experienced at least one symptom of PTSD.
- Children and youth exposed to domestic violence experience emotional, mental, and social damage that can affect their developmental growth.¹⁸
- Intimate partner violence is associated with increased risk of chronic pain, neurological disorders, gastrointestinal disorders, migraine headaches, and other disabilities.¹⁹
- Intimate partner violence also is associated with preterm birth, low birth weight, and decreased gestational age.²⁰
- Homicide by an intimate partner is the second leading cause of traumatic death among pregnant women, second only to medical complications during pregnancy.²¹
- In the U.S., 12 percent of women visiting a hospital emergency department at any given time are in abusive relationships, and approximately 35 percent of emergency room visits, 50 percent of all acute injuries, and 21 percent of all injured women requiring urgent surgery were the result of partner violence.²²

Costs to Victims, Survivors and Society

- The health-related costs of intimate partner violence in the U.S. exceed $8.3 billion each year.²³ Intimate partner violence costs a health plan $19.3 million each year for every 100,000 women between ages 18 and 64 enrolled.
- The increased annual health care costs for victims of intimate partner violence persist as much as 15 years after the cessation of the abuse.²⁴

- Even five years after abuse ends, health care costs for women with a history of intimate partner violence remain 20 percent higher than for women with no history of violence.²⁵
- One in eight stalking victims lost time from work because of fear for their safety or to pursue activities such as obtaining a restraining order or testifying in court.²⁶
- Domestic violence victims lose a total of nearly 8 million days of paid work—the equivalent of more than 32,000 full-time jobs—and nearly 5.6 million days of household productivity each year as a result of the violence.²⁷

Whether considered individually or in totality, the data reflects the high prevalence and incidence of intimate partner violence in the U.S., and the ongoing need for both intervention and prevention efforts of the types currently supported by FVPSA.

II. PURPOSE AND PROGRAM OPERATIONS

A. Program Description

The Department of Health and Human Services' (HHS) Administration for Children and Families (ACF) administers FVPSA, through the Family and Youth Services Bureau (FYSB) in the Administration on Children, Youth and Families administers the FVPSA grant program. These grants serve as the primary federal funding stream dedicated to supporting emergency shelter and supportive services for victims of domestic violence and their dependents. The grant programs include formula grants to states,²⁸ U.S. territories, Indian tribes and state domestic violence coalitions, as well as grants for national and special-issue resource centers. See Appendix A: Domestic Violence Service Network Infographic for more information on FVPSA-funded programs.

FVPSA formula grants are awarded to every state and territory, and to over 200 tribes, to fund local domestic violence programs. In FY 2014, the FVPSA state and tribal grants funded 1,250 domestic violence shelter programs, 257 domestic violence non-shelter programs, and 137 Tribal domestic violence grants, providing both a safe haven and an array of supportive services to intervene and prevent abuse. A map depicting the number of programs (excluding tribes and territories) funded via mandatory formula grants to each state is below (see Map 1: Total Number of Domestic Violence Programs by State). Appendix B lists each of the local programs funded by FVPSA grants to states in FY 2014.

In addition to funding local programs, state and territory domestic violence coalitions, tribes, and resource centers, FVPSA funds the National Domestic Violence Hotline, culturally-specific institutes on domestic violence, and targeted discretionary grants, included in Appendix A: Domestic Violence Service Network Infographic. FVPSA also provides funding for the Centers for ²⁸ Throughout this report and as per FVPSA Statute (42 USC 10402), the term "States" means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Map 1: Total Number of Domestic Violence Programs by State²⁹

B. Statutory Authority

First authorized as part of the Child Abuse Amendments of 1984 (Public Law (Pub.L.) 98-457), the FVPSA has been amended eight times. Most recently, the FVPSA was reauthorized for five years by the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Reauthorization Act of 2010 (Pub.L. 111-320).

Legislative Charge for the Program

1. Assist states and Indian tribes in efforts to increase public awareness about, and primary and secondary prevention of, family violence, domestic violence, and dating violence;
2. Assist states and Indian tribes in efforts to provide immediate shelter and supportive services for victims of family violence, domestic violence, or dating violence, and their dependents;
3. Provide for a national domestic violence hotline; and
4. Provide for technical assistance and training relating to family violence, domestic violence, and dating violence programs to states and Indian tribes, local public agencies (including law enforcement agencies, courts, and legal, social service, and health care professionals in public agencies), nonprofit private organizations (including faith-based and charitable organizations, community-based organizations, and voluntary associations), tribal organizations, and other persons seeking such assistance and training.

C. Program Operations and Grants Administration

All grantees must apply for funds and meet eligibility requirements. Competitive grant applications are peer-reviewed before selection. The FVPSA grants are authorized for $175 million, annually. Appropriations for the FVPSA grants in FY 2013 were $121.2 million and in FY 2014 were $133.5 million. When appropriations exceed $130 million, not less than 25 percent of the excess above $130 million will be reserved and made available to fund the Specialized Services to Abused Parents and their Children grant program.

The statute specifies how 98.5 percent of appropriated funds will be allocated, including three formula grant programs and one competitive grant program. The remaining 1.5 percent is discretionary, and used for competitive grants, technical assistance, program oversight, and special projects that respond to critical or otherwise unaddressed issues and emerging trends in the field. The following chart, Figure 1: FVPSA Statutory Distribution of Funds illustrates the breakdown of all appropriated funds per statute:

D. Appropriations

For FY 2013 and FY 2014, appropriations were allocated as follows in Table 1: FVPSA Program Allocation of Appropriations by Fiscal Year.

Table 1: FVPSA Program Allocation of Appropriations by Fiscal Year ³⁰
Category	FY2013	FY2014	% Approp.
State and Territorial Formula Grants	$84.9 million	$93.4 million	70%

Total	$129.37 million	$143.7 million	100%

E. Administration, Monitoring, and Evaluation

The FVPSA Program, with nine full-time staff, administered grant awards using up to 2.5 percent of appropriations, as specified in the statute. FVPSA program staff conducts peer reviews of competitive grants and evaluates formula grant applications to award funds. The staff monitors grantees, provides technical assistance, and conducts regular evaluations of programs.

Monitoring occurs through monthly and quarterly contacts including teleconferences, site visits, and desk reviews. The staff also supports multiple departmental intra-agency and federal inter-agency collaborations on a range of issues affecting victims of domestic violence and their families (highlighted in Section IX. Collaborations). Contractors provide administrative and logistical support.

During the years covered in this report, the FVPSA program and its grantees developed multiple resources strengthening the evidence base for domestic violence services. Below are summaries of some of the initiatives.

DV Evidence Project

This project is led by the National Resource Center on Domestic Violence. This online resource center houses a comprehensive evidence review of domestic violence core services, programs, and innovative practices, including the review summaries and a conceptual framework for domestic violence services. In 2013, “Counseling Services for Domestic Violence Survivors: A Review of the Empirical Evidence” was added.

³⁰ Amounts have been rounded to the nearest $100 thousand; due to rounding, columns may exceed actual totals. Actual totals are used in “Total” row.

This review captures the empirical evidence on the effectiveness of this key service provided by FVPSA-funded programs. Other reviews are presented on shelter, support groups, and advocacy.

Systematic Review of Trauma-Focused Interventions for Domestic Violence Survivors

http://www.nationalcenterdvtraumamh.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/03/NCDVTMH_EBPLitReview2013.pdf

The National Center on Domestic Violence, Trauma and Mental Health conducted a literature review of evidence-based trauma treatments for survivors of domestic violence. The resulting paper released in 2013 provided an analysis of nine trauma-based treatments specifically designed or modified for survivors of domestic violence, along with recommendations for research and practice.

Comprehensive Review of Interventions for Children Exposed to Domestic Violence

<http://www.futureswithoutviolence.org/wp-content/uploads/Comprehensive-Review-of-Interventions-for-Children-Exposed-to-Domestic-Violence.pdf>

Futures Without Violence conducted a national scan of interventions for children exposed to domestic violence and created a web-based repository of information about interventions and related resources. A three-pronged approach that combined literature reviews, searches of registries and publications on evidence-based practices, and direct inquiry with key informants was employed to identify interventions that span across the continuum of empirical, experiential and contextual evidence. A comprehensive review paper of these interventions was released in 2014.

Practical Implications of Current Domestic Violence Research for Victim Advocates and Service Providers

<https://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/244348.pdf>

This project was jointly funded with the Department of Justice's (DOJ) National Institutes of Justice (NIJ) and the Office for Victims of Crime. It was a synthesis of the research literature with specific interpretations of how the research should guide advocates' work with survivors. In particular, it delved into specific questions, such as which victims seek civil protective orders, with citations from the research literature. In 2013, NIJ released this report.

The FVPSA program collects data on clients served from sub-grantee/contractual domestic violence programs as part of its Performance Progress Report. This data is reported annually and used internally as part of HHS' performance measurement process. Much of the data presented in this report, such as demographics on the clients served, is from this reporting system. Section III: The Program's Impact, reflects this data. Additionally, the FVPSA Program collects outcome data from the clients served. In 2014, 92 percent (91.2 percent in 2013) of clients served in local domestic violence programs knew about more community resources (first required outcome) after receiving services, and 93 percent (92.3 percent in 2013) of clients knew about more ways to plan for their safety (second required outcome). These two outcomes are correlated with other indices of longer-term client safety and well-being.

Research evidence shows that FVPSA-supported programs are addressing critical needs:

- Shelter programs are among the most needed and used resources for victims with abusive partners.³¹
- A FVPSA-funded study by the NIJ, Meeting Survivors' Needs: A Multi-State Study of Domestic Violence Shelter Experiences, shows that the nation's domestic violence shelters are addressing both urgent and long-term needs of victims of violence, and are helping victims protect themselves and their children.³²
- Working with a domestic violence victim advocate and receiving social support while at a shelter significantly reduced the likelihood that a victim would be abused again and improved the victim's quality of life.³³ Positive life changes were demonstrated as victims successfully obtained desired community resources and increased their social supports.

III. THE PROGRAM'S IMPACT

A. Serving Families in Crisis

Domestic violence shelter programs are among the most effective resources for victims with abusive partners. The statistics collected by the FVPSA program include a count of all the services for victims of domestic violence and their dependents provided by local domestic violence programs funded wholly or in part with FVPSA funds. Local domestic violence programs may receive additional funds from a state or local government or from a private source.

Local domestic violence programs provided immediate shelter and supportive services to 1,346,228 adult victims of domestic violence in FY 2013 and 1,277,836 in FY 2014. (A detailed table of adults and children served in 2013 and 2014 is included in Appendix C: Total Victims Served by State and Year.) There were a number of factors that contributed to the reduction in adult victims served by the program from FY 2013 to FY 2014. Funding reductions in FY 2013, due to sequestration, were reflected in FY 2014 service numbers because states make sub-grants to local programs near the end of the year. The long-term impacts of the economic recession also affected victims' choices in seeking help; provided less funding to local programs for staffing and services; and closed some shelters. Additionally, some states changed how they distributed the FVPSA dollars within their state, thus changing the number of local programs contributing to this report.

FVPSA collects information on the ages and race/ethnicity of the victims served. In 2014, of the clients whose ages were known, the majority (57 percent) of the victims served were ages 25-59. Twenty-five percent of those served were under age 18. Young adults ages 18-24 made up 15 percent of the clients served. Three percent were over age 59. In 2014, about 45 percent of victims served were White; 18 percent were Black; 14.5 percent were Latino; 2 percent were Asian or Pacific Islander/Native Hawaiian; and 3.5 percent were American Indian (Figure 2: People Served by State and Tribal Grantees by Race/Ethnicity, 2014).

Domestic Violence Shelter Services

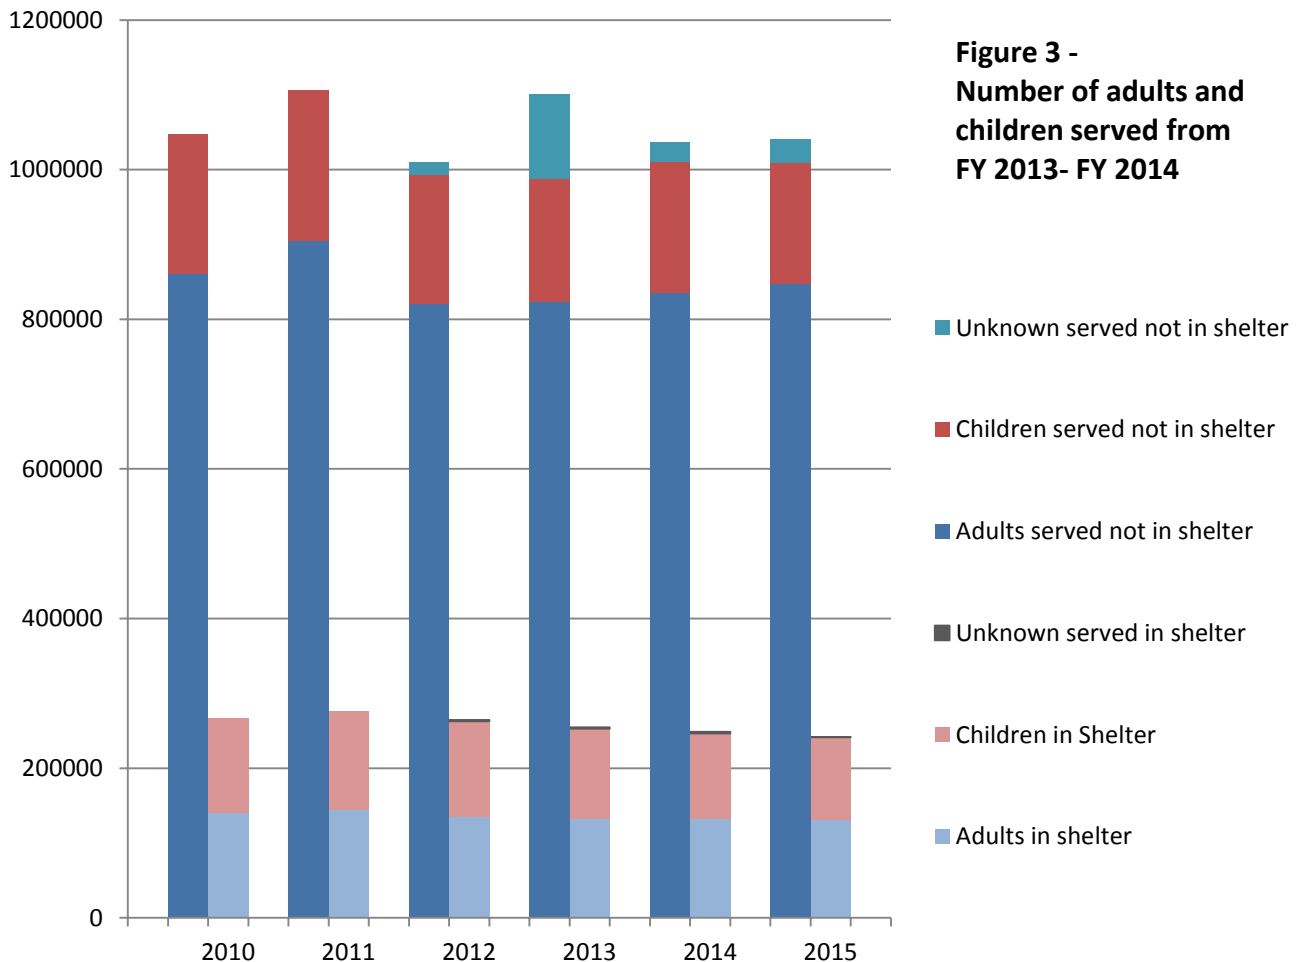

As reference previously, results from *Meeting Survivors' Needs: A Multi-State Study of Domestic Violence Shelter Experiences*³⁴ help paint a picture of the typical domestic violence program in the United States. These results, published in 2008, remain the most current and comprehensive data of its kind available. See Appendix D: Domestic Violence Shelter Services Infographic for an illustration of the findings bulleted below.

- Shelters provide immediate safety to victims and their children fleeing domestic violence. Shelters also help victims heal emotional wounds, rebuild economic self-sufficiency, connect with communities and stay safe, long-term. Most programs operate shelters, state or local hotlines, and outreach services 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
- The average domestic violence shelter has 16 to 17 staff and 17 monthly volunteers.
- Seventy percent of programs have fewer than 20 paid staff, including 38 percent with less than 10 paid staff. The average starting salary of a full-time, salaried, front-line advocate in 2008 was $24,765.³⁵
- Ninety-eight percent of sampled shelters have the capability to accommodate residents with disabilities.
- Eighty-two percent have bilingual staff, including 71 percent who have staff who speak Spanish; sampled programs had staff/volunteers who speak 37 different languages.

A local domestic violence program may operate its own shelter facility, use contracts with hotels or have access to volunteer safe homes to meet victims' needs. However, the majority of clients only access non-residential, supportive services, such as advocacy and counseling (noted as "Adults served not in shelter" in the chart below). These services are described in greater detail in the following section. Figure 3 shows adults and children served from FY 2013-FY 2014. Local domestic violence programs provided 8.2 million shelter nights for victims and their families. The average number of nights that victims stayed in shelter increased from 30 nights in FY 2012 to 33 nights in FY 2014. Anecdotal reports from programs indicate that clients staying in shelters may remain longer due to more complex needs and the lack of affordable housing.

Program Reflections: Missouri

"Housing is a request that we get on a daily basis. In our area we have a shortage of affordable housing. Even after shelter, clients have nowhere to go on a long-term basis."

-Advocate at a program in Missouri

FVPSA-funded programs reported 186,558 unmet requests for shelter in FY 2013 and 196,467 unmet requests for shelter in FY 2014. This number is a count of the number of unmet shelter requests due to programs being at capacity.

Domestic Violence Non-Residential Services

In addition to meeting the immediate safety and shelter needs of domestic violence victims, their children, and dependents, FVPSA-funded programs provide many other necessary services. The report, Meeting Survivors' Needs Through Non-Residential Domestic Violence Services & Supports: A Multi-State Study (2011) sampled the experiences of 1,467 domestic violence survivors receiving services from FVPSA-funded domestic violence programs in four states: Alabama, Illinois, Massachusetts, and Washington. The following key findings demonstrate how survivors value the vital services beyond shelter refuge:

- Ninety-five percent of survivors surveyed attested to feeling “confident” in how to plan for their safety after receiving support from a domestic violence advocate.
- More than half (51 percent) of survivors surveyed indicated that they were in “financial trouble” when they first contacted their local domestic violence programs for services.
- More than one-third of survivors surveyed listed “mental health issues” related to abuse as one of the challenges for which they sought supportive services from their domestic violence program.
- Besides shelter, survivors surveyed indicated individual counseling as the number one service sought from programs, followed by group therapy, supportive services, and legal advocacy.
- The number one desired service from a domestic violence program, according to survivors, is “talking to someone who understands their situation” (96.7 percent of survivors surveyed ranked this service as their top priority).

State and tribal sub-grantees responded to more than 2.7 million crisis calls in 2013 and almost 2.6 million crisis calls in 2014 via local, state, and tribal hotlines. These calls included victims asking for crisis counseling, shelter services or other support services, but exclude calls to the National Domestic Violence Hotline (discussed later in this report). Grantee focus groups revealed that funding decreases and outreach and public awareness staffing reductions negatively affected the public’s awareness of services available, likely reducing calls for support and assistance.

Community Education

Local domestic violence programs offer community education to the general public. Examples of conducted activities include workshops to community and tribal leaders, and trainings for health professionals.

- In FY 2013, 86,173 training presentations were conducted for 2.3 million people. In FY 2014, 112,710 training presentations were conducted for 2.4 million people.

Local domestic violence programs also participated in events that increased public awareness and promoted outreach to victims.

- In FY 2013 and FY 2014, respectively, 242,507 and 122,113 public awareness events were held nationwide by FVPSA-supported programs.

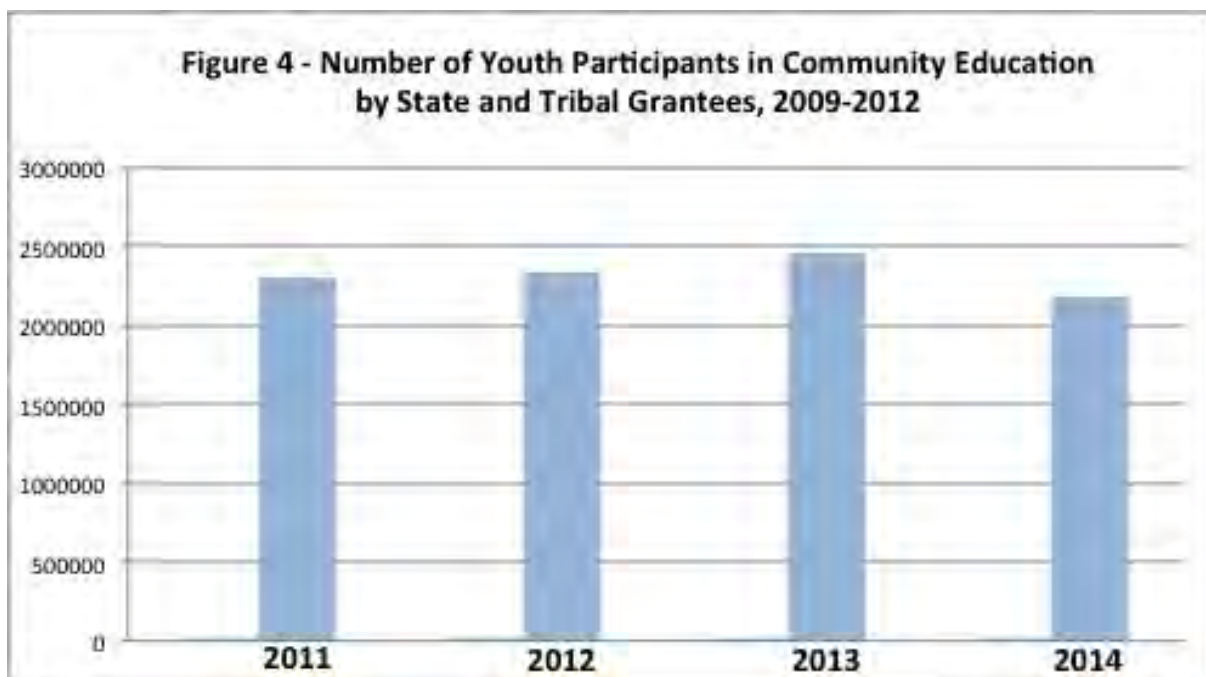

Children and Youth Services

In FY 2013, a total of 120,452 children or youth were sheltered due to domestic violence (114,573 in FY 2014). While served by a local domestic violence program, children also may receive services to address crisis intervention, safety planning, and individual or group counseling.

Local domestic violence programs track the number of times they meet with a child to provide individual counseling or advocacy, including when a child attends a counseling or advocacy group, or is served by individual mentoring or recreational activities. Examples of child focused group counseling may include a support group for children who are exposed to violence, or art therapy sessions. The numbers in Table 2, referred to as service contacts, are the most recent data presented as a snapshot for FY 2014.

Table 2: Services Provided to Children by State and Tribal Grantees, 2014
	Number of Service Contacts
Individual Counseling/Advocacy	1,115,703
Group Counseling	586,948
Individual Activities	647,971

Local domestic violence programs also provide presentations to children and youth about domestic violence, dating violence, healthy relationships or available services for victims (see Figure 4: Number of Youth Participants in Community Education by State and Tribal Grantees, 2009-2012).

B. State and Territorial Formula Grants

In 2014, the FVPSA Formula Grants funded 1,250 domestic violence shelter programs, 257 domestic violence non-shelter programs, and 137 Tribal domestic violence grants. Grants to over 200 Tribes will be discussed in the following section. The FVPSA State and Territorial formula grants comprise 70 percent of FVPSA appropriations. FVPSA formula grants are awarded to every state³⁶ and territory. States and territories administer grants differently, often through state health, child welfare, or criminal justice agencies. Several states contract with their respective State Domestic Violence Coalitions to administer FVPSA funds at the state level. The Pacific Territories (Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Marianas) and the Virgin Islands have historically applied for and received funds through the Office of Community Services' Social Services Block Grant.

The states and territories each determine how to allocate FVPSA formula funds to local domestic violence programs. Some share funds equally among all programs and others use competitive processes. Several have complex formulas based on population and areas served, while others focus on areas of need, such as rural communities.

The size of state and territorial awards depends upon population. For states, the base award is $600,000 plus an additional amount determined by population. Guam, American Samoa, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands are allotted not less than one-eighth of one percent of the amounts available.

A chart of funds awarded by state and territory is attached as Appendix E: State and Territory Funding FY 2013-2014 and an overview for FY 2013 and FY 2014 is as follows in Table 3: Amount of Awards by State and Territory:

C. Tribal Formula Grants

The FVPSA statute dedicates 10 percent of FVPSA appropriations to federally-recognized tribes (including Alaska Native Villages) and tribal organizations that meet the definition of "Indian Tribe" or "Tribal organization",³⁷ and are able to demonstrate their capacity to carry out domestic ³⁶ Throughout this report and as per FVPSA Statute (42 USC 10402), the term "States" means each of the several States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

³⁷ Definitions indicated as per statute 25 U.S.C. 450b, reclassified as 25 USC 5304; available at violence prevention and services programs. Tribal formula grants are distributed based on the number of tribes applying and on the populations of the eligible applicants. The most current Census is used for the tribes' enrollment data. In instances where the population data are not available in the Census, the Bureau of Indian Affairs is referenced for its population data.

In FY 2012 when the 2010 Census was referenced for its new population data, award amounts shifted and programs either experienced increases or decreases in funding. For the smallest category of Indian tribes (those with a population less than 1,500) there was an approximate 37 percent reduction to their awards as compared to those from previous years. Grant awards at approximately $25,000 decreased to approximately $14,000. As a result, several programs reported sustainability concerns and an inability to provide core services to each victim of domestic violence and their dependents as they had been able to in the past.

In FY 2013, 38 percent of the 565 federally recognized tribes applied and received FVPSA funding. In FY 2014, 42 percent applied and received funding.

Program Reflections: Washington

"A woman with a 2-month old baby called looking for shelter. She had fled her abuser with nothing but her purse and her baby and had nowhere to go. She was new to the area and her cell phone was about to die. We did not have emergency shelter space for her and she didn't have a way to make a bunch of phone calls to find a place. This kind of request happens often and we do our best to come up with money for a hotel night, but we don't have a budget for this. We often have to point people to a general homeless shelter where they can only stay from one night to the next. It's heartbreaking." - Advocate in Washington

In FY 2013, tribal domestic violence programs reported serving 32,972 victims of domestic violence and their children. Of the victims served:

- 19,786 were women (90 percent of adults), 2,250 men (10 percent of adults), and 10,646 were children;
- The majority of people served were either American Indian or Alaskan Native (73 percent); and
- Eight percent served were White, six percent Black, nine percent Hispanic and four percent self-identified as Other or otherwise unknown.

Additionally, tribal programs answered over 830,371 crisis calls. Crisis calls included victims calling for counseling, shelter, or other services. Approximately 79 percent of the 137 tribal grantees contributed to this report.

In FY 2014, tribal domestic violence programs reported serving a total of 30,860 victims of domestic violence and their children. Of that total:

http://uscode.house.gov/view.xhtml?req=\(title:25%20section:5304%20edition:prelim\)).

- 17,169 women (88 percent of adults), 2,392 men (12 percent of adults), and 10,646 children were served (653 were not-specified);
- The majority of people served were American Indian or Alaska Native (68 percent);
- Twenty-two percent were White, four percent Black, three percent Hispanic and three percent self-described as other or otherwise unknown; and
- A majority (51 percent) of victims served were under age 25.

In both FY 2013 and FY 2014, FVPSA tribal grants funded approximately 31 domestic violence shelters and 160 non-residential service sites. Due to the lack of tribally owned domestic violence shelters, the programs often used alternative shelter options such as safe homes and/or motels to keep victims of domestic violence and their dependents safe. Although all FVPSA-funded local domestic violence shelters are available to all people, without discrimination, it is not uncommon for tribal victims of domestic violence to choose their communities' support systems over mainstream shelters and services, or those not in alignment with their cultural values.

Tribal domestic violence programs reported providing 150,729 shelter nights for victims and their children in FY 2014. The average number of nights a victim is given shelter in a tribal program is 20 nights. There were 1,101 unmet requests for shelter within tribal programs due to lack of space or resources.

A chart of funds awarded to tribal grantees is attached as Appendix F: Indian Tribe and Alaska Native Village Funding FY 2013 – FY 2014. Tables 4 and 5: Indian Tribe and Alaska Native Village Funding (for FY 2013 and FY 2014, respectively) provide an overview. As depicted in Table 4, the majority of grants awarded to tribes are on the lower end of the funding amount as indicated in FY 2013 in the lowest amount of $14,071 and in FY 2014 at $16,386.

Tribal domestic violence programs provide educational outreach programs to increase support and educate people about the services available for victims and dependents. These programs are geared toward tribal members, leaders, law enforcement, and others to increase participants' awareness of domestic violence and available helping resources in the community. The programs provide presentations aimed at preventing the violence from occurring by teaching about healthy relationships to both youth and adults.

In FY 2013,

- 105 programs provided 1,873 presentations to a general population of 50,385 adults, including non-Natives; and
- 96 programs provided 2,399 presentations to a general population of 32,411 youth, including non-Natives.

In FY 2014,

- 114 programs provided 1,721 presentations to a general population of 56,864 adults; and
- 100 programs provided 3,553 presentations to a general population of 32,577 youth.

IV. THE NATIONAL DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOTLINE: Meeting Needs with Empathy and Expanded Accessibility

The National Domestic Violence Hotline (Hotline) provides life-saving and life-changing services for those in need. Not only does it offer callers emergency safety planning assistance and critical connections to service providers throughout the country, but equally important the Hotline provides emotional support that validates the experiences of domestic violence and dating violence victims and helps to empower them as they begin the difficult journey of healing and rebuilding their lives free from abuse and coercive control.

Survivor Story: National Domestic Violence Hotline

Helen³⁸ was a woman in her 50s who lived with her partner. Their home was in her name, and she paid all of the bills. Helen worked from home; however, her partner did not work at all so he was always there monitoring her. Helen was not able to leave the house without her partner insisting on accompanying her or accusing her of doing drugs or cheating on him. Even though Helen was the primary wage earner in their home, her partner controlled all the money, including her paycheck and only gave her a small allowance to live on. Over the course of their relationship, Helen's partner would physically threaten her, break furniture and punch through doors to scare her, but he never hit her. Helen was afraid to reach out to local law enforcement because when she called them previously, her partner accused her of attacking him so the police arrested Helen and sent her to jail for two days. At this point, Helen felt totally trapped and isolated; she had no family or friends she could turn to for support. With no other options, she sought help from The Hotline, and that was probably one of the most important calls she ever made. Hotline advocates linked Helen to local resources and encouraged her to speak with a legal advocate for information about evicting her abusive partner. They also talked with Helen about the mixed emotions she struggled with related to her partner leaving and discussed her secretly attending confidential counseling to process those feelings. "It helps to not be so alone in this," Helen expressed to Hotline advocates. "Thank you again."

The Hotline provides immediate and real-time (i.e., live) responses to thousands of adult and youth victims of family violence, domestic violence, and dating violence; their family members; and other callers seeking information and assistance, such as domestic violence advocates, government officials, law enforcement personnel, and the general public.

- In FY 2013, the Hotline received 248,530 calls with an average of 20,711 calls per month.
- In FY 2014, the Hotline received 266,615 calls with an average of 22,218 calls per month.
- More than 90 percent of callers report using the Hotline as their first call for help.

In FY 2013, the Hotline answered its three millionth call since its inception in 1996. A Hotline advocate took the call from a male victim who identified as LGBTQ; he was experiencing physical and verbal abuse. The Hotline advocate provided him with referrals to resources that were specifically tailored to meet his needs and his self-identified goals. The Hotline directly connects callers to a comprehensive and nationwide referral system of over 4,000 community programs. The Hotline operates 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and is available in more than 200 languages.

- Approximately 7,490 contacts during FY 2013 and FY 2014 used interpretation services, including translation services for email and other caller needs in more than 48 different languages.

The Hotline's overarching goal is to answer every single call that comes in every single day; however, with limited resources as well as call volume spikes due to media attention (as depicted in Figure 5: Hotline Calls Received and Answered), this is not always achievable. During FY 2013 and FY 2014, the average Hotline caller waited 58 seconds before his or her call could be answered.

³⁸ Names have been changed.

Response time was affected by call-spikes experienced when the Hotline was featured on nationally syndicated television shows and in other media outlets. Information about the Hotline has appeared on MTV's Real World and Teen Mom, Dr. Phil, Steve Harvey Morning Show, CBS's Mom and The Today Show. It also has appeared on Spanish media outlets such as Univision and Telemundo.

On average, each televised media spot resulted in nearly a 12 percent spike in daily call volume, with some media spots resulting in more than a 100 percent increase.

The demand for Hotline services is expected to rise even further due to robust outreach through mass media and community-based public awareness campaigns, improved access for multi-lingual callers and continuing economic challenges encountered by many victims and survivors. Additionally, the National Football League (NFL) plans to air the Hotline number during televised games. The promotion of the Hotline number in this context will reach many survivors who may never have heard of the Hotline services, and that is expected to significantly increase the number of contacts to the Hotline in the near future.

Digital online services are growing at a rapid rate. This is evidence of survivors' preference for seeking information and help via the internet, as well as a clear indicator of survivors' increasing use of smartphones. To help respond to more people impacted by domestic violence and dating violence, the Hotline initiated digital chat services on its website in October of 2013, which effectively eliminated the need for email communications. Subsequently in FY 2014, Hotline advocates conducted a total of 11,547 chats.

The Hotline's expanded secure text and chat features with Hotline users in FY 2013 and FY 2014 provided much safer and more confidential means of communication. Moreover, the new chat services benefit deaf and hard of hearing survivors, from whom the Hotline continues to receive more and more contacts.

Hotline advocates answered 424 and 366 contacts from people who are deaf and hard of hearing in FY 2013 and FY 2014, respectively, with an average of nearly 33 contacts from deaf and hard of hearing survivors per month.

Chat services bring certain issues to light for the Hotline because the medium gives survivors a greater sense of anonymity (and thus, freedom to be more open about what they share with Hotline advocates). One of the most significant trends is survivors' disclosure of sexual coercion, something they discuss much more freely on digital services as compared to telephonic services.

Survivors and others interested in learning more about domestic violence and dating violence visit the Hotline's two websites, www.thehotline.org and www.loveisrespect.org. The second site is focused on services and information for youth. Together, both websites offer a wealth of information on domestic violence and dating violence—receiving more than 5.1 million visits in FY 2013 and FY 2014 combined.

- In FY 2013, www.thehotline.org received 655,732 visits and www.loveisrespect.org received nearly 1.4 million visits.
- In FY 2014, traffic to www.thehotline.org rose to more than 1.1 million visitors and similarly, visits to www.loveisrespect.org jumped to 2.4 million.

These numbers demonstrate how important online resources have become for survivors who are exploring the wide range of topics related to domestic violence and dating violence, including healthy relationships.

FY 2013 and FY 2014 presented the Hotline with particularly complex resource challenges. An 11 percent cut in FVPSA funding to the Hotline, as a result of sequestration in FY 2013, coupled with reduced private donations as a result of the recession, made it impossible for the Hotline to answer the growing number of the calls and chats received. This problem was compounded in September 2014, when a video of professional football player Ray Rice assaulting his wife received extensive news coverage. The traffic to the website surged so sharply that the Hotline website crashed; at the same time, calls and chats surged 84 percent. With these daunting challenges, the Hotline had a call drop rate of 50 percent for a brief period of time.

At the end of FY 2014, some of the increase in call volume was addressed through funding from the NFL, which committed enough support to add nine additional advocates to the Hotline's call and chat lines. The added support also allowed the Hotline to transition trained part-time and relief staff to full-time coverage. Additionally, an increase in the FVPSA appropriation for the Hotline in FY 2014, after sequestration ended, allowed the program to maintain its core base of advocates and internet services.

One of the Hotline's most exciting new efforts in FY 2014 was the work being done to help victim advocates develop a culturally-specific hotline service for Native American victims of domestic and dating violence. Native American survivors face unique challenges when seeking help: a lack of victim services and law enforcement on tribal lands, as well as special legal issues relating to tribal jurisdiction over domestic and dating violence crimes. The Hotline has supported a Native Women's Virtual Council for the two years of this reporting period. The Council has internally discussed recommendations with the Hotline for the eventual development of a Native-run hotline for victims of domestic violence and dating violence in Indian country.

V. SUPPORTING PROGRAMS AND THE COMMUNITY: RESOURCE CENTERS AND INSTITUTES AND STATE DOMESTIC VIOLENCE COALITIONS

A. National and Special Issue Resource Centers and Culturally-specific Institutes

Besides being the primary federal funding stream for the nationwide network of domestic violence shelters and non-residential supportive services, FVPSA funds the Domestic Violence Resource Network (DVRN) whose mission is to inform and strengthen domestic and dating violence intervention and prevention efforts at the individual, community and societal levels. The DVRN is a comprehensive network of FVPSA-funded national, special issue, and culturally-specific special issue resource centers that work collaboratively to promote promising practices and innovative strategies to enhance our nation's response to domestic dating violence.

The resource centers design, develop and disseminate consistent, comprehensive, and state-of-the-art responses to the diverse and often complex needs and challenges of domestic violence survivors and their families through targeted training and intensive technical assistance, comprehensive policy development, and strategic problem solving. The DVRN develops resources for all audiences, including: survivors of domestic and dating violence, victim advocates, culturally-specific community-based programs, educators, health care providers, early childhood specialists, child welfare providers, home visitors, legal services providers, law enforcement and court personnel, policy makers, government leaders, and other key stakeholders. It strives to ensure all these stakeholders have access to up-to-date information on best practices, policies, research, and victim resources.

The DVRN is comprised of two national resource centers, four special issue resource centers, and three culturally-specific special issue resource centers. The two tables below summarize the FY 2013 and FY 2014 funding levels and total number of trainings and technical assistance activities for each DVRN resource center and/or institute. Brief descriptions and key accomplishments of the DVRN partners are also provided

The National Resource Center on Domestic Violence (NRCDV) provides a wide range of free, comprehensive and individualized technical assistance, training and resource materials. The scope of NRCDV's technical assistance is broad and includes domestic violence and dating violence intervention and prevention, community education and organizing, public policy and systems advocacy, and funding. NRCDV develops information packets, fact sheets, applied research papers, funding alerts, and training curricula, and supports several special projects designed to explore issues more deeply or develop more comprehensive assistance to a particular constituent group. These special projects include the Domestic Violence Awareness Project, VAWnet – the National Online Resource Center on Violence Against Women, Building Comprehensive Solutions to Domestic Violence, and the Domestic Violence Non-Residential Services & Supports Study (funded by the National Institute of Justice).

Accomplishments

- Responding to Domestic Violence, Sexual Violence, and Stalking in the Federal Workplace
 - NRCDV developed an online resource page specifically for federal workers to organize educational materials on this topic including handouts, sample workplace policies, domestic violence educational resources, links to mandatory reporting laws, resources for survivors, a national technical assistance providers listing, and guidance from the Federal government. <http://www.vawnet.org/WorkplaceViolence>
- DV Evidence Project
 - Led by the NRCDV, this online resource center houses a comprehensive evidence review of domestic violence core services, programs, and innovative practices, including the review summaries and a conceptual framework for domestic violence services. In 2013, "A Review of the Empirical Evidence on Counseling Services for Domestic Violence Survivors" was added. This review captures the empirical evidence on the effectiveness of this key service provided by FVPSA-funded programs. Other reviews are presented on shelter, support groups, and advocacy. www.dvevidenceproject.org
- Online Special Collection Resources
 - NRCDV's VAWnet Special Collections are organized lists of select resources on specific topics related to domestic and sexual violence that provide contextual information to encourage critical analysis. These online Special Collections are consistently among the most popular resources offered on VAWnet, with its main directory alone receiving over 138,000 views during this reporting period. In 2014, seven new or updated Special Collections were published:
 - Open Doors: Domestic Violence Shelter Development (March 2014) - <http://vawnet.org/special-collections/dvshelter.php>
 - Open Doors: Thinking Beyond Shelter (Or Alternative Ways to Help Survivors) (March 2014) - <http://vawnet.org/special-collections/DVShelterAlternatives.php>

- Domestic Violence in Latin@ Communities (February 2014) - <http://vawnet.org/special-collections/DVLatin@.php>
- Update: Preventing and Responding to Teen Dating Violence (January 2014) - <http://vawnet.org/special-collections/TDV.php>
- Update: Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) and Other Tax Credits (January 2014) - <http://vawnet.org/special-collections/DVEITC.php>
- Update: Immigrant Women and Domestic Violence (October 2013) - <http://vawnet.org/special-collections/DVImmigrant.php>
- Update: Immigrant Women and Sexual Violence (October 2013) - <http://vawnet.org/special-collections/SVImmigrant.php>

Program Reflections: National Resource Center on Domestic Violence

“Thank you all so much for this new special collection of materials on trauma-informed care. We have been pulling together materials in order to inform both policy work and our coalition training and technical assistance events over the next year; so to have this research so well integrated as a comprehensive resource is very helpful.” - Executive Director of Maine Coalition To End Domestic Violence

www.niwrc.org

The National Indigenous Women's Resource Center, Inc. (NIWRC) is the national Indian resource center addressing domestic violence and safety for Indian women. NIWRC is responsible for providing tribal specific resources, developing policy and leading and/or participating in research activities to Native, non-Native and Native Hawaiian programs and organizations. NIWRC delivers these resources through public awareness activities and training and technical assistance.

NIWRC's efforts are guided by FVPSA statutory requirements as well as their own principles – to reclaim the sovereignty of Native nations and safeguard Native women and their children. During FY 2013 and FY 2014, NIWRC accomplished many goals including several that supported HHS priorities.

Accomplishments

- Addressing Needs of Survivors in LGBTQ Communities
 - NIWRC coordinated with the National Coalition of Anti-Violence Programs and Asian & Pacific Islander Institute on Domestic Violence to address the needs of survivors in LGBTQ communities. The intent of this alliance was to strengthen relationships between anti-violence advocates within LGBTQ communities and LGBTQ advocacy organizations and advocates dedicated to ending gender-based violence.
- HIV/AIDS
 - NIWRC continued to expand its efforts to provide technical assistance, training and resources to tribes and tribal programs on the intersections of HIV/AIDS and violence against Native women. In FY2014, a comprehensive and diverse repository of materials from native organizations and local programs, and a webinar training tool was made available to the public on their website www.NIWRC.org.

NIWRC also engaged individuals, advocates, programs and other national organizations by using social media and infographs to promote HIV/AIDS awareness activities.

- Impact of Domestic Violence on Children who Witness Violence

- NIWRC, in partnership with the National Indian Child Welfare Association, the Indian Country Child Trauma Center out of the University of Oklahoma and WomenSpirit, the Washington State Native American Coalition Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault held the first Children Exposed to Violence Institute in FY 2014. The training, “SYNERGY: Addressing the Impact of Domestic Violence on Our Children”, was attended by 150 participants from across the U.S., representing tribal nations, Alaska Native villages, and off reservation communities. Training subjects including:
 - Indian Child Welfare Act basics
 - In-home services
 - Teen dating violence
 - Trauma-informed care
 - Intersection between child welfare and sex trafficking
 - Adult children who experience domestic violence in childhood and what we can learn
 - Best practices in domestic violence and child maltreatment.

There was a strong youth focus and presence at this training. Voices of youth from the Native American Youth and Family Center opened the training and gave testimony and purpose to the importance of the work in this area. Additionally, the Native Youth Sexual Health Network talked about the impact of historical trauma on Native youth and engaged everyone in interactive energizers that promoted healthy sexuality and well-being.

- Peer Mentoring Training and Technical Assistance

- Peer support and mentoring with FVPSA tribal grantees is a unique initiative between the FVPSA Program, NIWRC, and FVPSA tribal grantees. Regional peer support and mentoring among FVPSA tribal grantees promotes networking and information sharing, strengthens individual and programmatic knowledge bases and builds capacity, not only for administrative and management issues but for creating best practices and practical know how in working with women, children, families and communities who are impacted by domestic violence.

An example of a successful peer-mentoring event occurred in FY 2014. The FVPSA program and NIWRC partnered to facilitate a tribal peer-mentoring meeting in Memphis, Tennessee with FVPSA funded tribal programs in the Southeastern portion of the U.S. Peer mentoring included a demonstration on “Healing Spirits” – a promising practice to effectively engage tribal women through the healing process. Prior to the meeting, program participants were asked to identify key topics and issues they wanted to discuss. The identified topics and issues were intertwined throughout the peer mentoring process and consisted of facilitated discussions on “Why Women Stay”, “Strengthening Our Advocacy”, “Intersections of Domestic Violence”, “Mental Health and Substance Abuse”, and “Trauma-Informed Care and Self Care.”

SPECIAL ISSUES RESOURCE CENTERS

The Battered Women's Justice Project (BWJP) consists of two partnering agencies that operate in separate locations.

Criminal and Civil Justice Center
800-903-0111 ext. 1
www.bwjp.org

The Battered Women's Justice Project, located in Minneapolis, Minnesota, promotes change within the civil and criminal justice systems that enhances their effectiveness in providing safety, security and justice for victims of domestic violence and their families. BWJP provides technical assistance to advocates, civil attorneys, judges and court personnel, law enforcement officers, prosecutors, probation officers, batterers intervention program staff, defense attorneys and policymakers; and to victims of domestic and dating violence and their families and friends. Through trainings and consultations, BWJP disseminates up-to-date information on recent research findings and promotes the implementation of best practices and policies that emerge from the work of pioneering communities around the country.

National Clearinghouse for the Defense of Battered Women
www.ncdbw.org

The National Clearinghouse for the Defense of Battered Women (NCDBW), located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, addresses the unique needs of domestic violence victims who, as a result of the abuse they have experienced at the hands of their intimate partner, end up charged with a crime. The (NCDBW) strives to prevent the re-victimization of battered women defendants by providing specialized technical assistance, resources, and support to survivors charged with crimes and to members of their defense teams. Staff conduct trainings for the criminal justice and advocacy communities; consult with local, state and national organizations; maintain an extensive resource library of relevant case law, research and litigation materials; and advocate for public policy and institutional and social change.

Accomplishments

- Effective Advocacy on Family Court Issues Curriculum
 - BWJP developed a curriculum on Effective Advocacy on Family Court Issues with the National Council on Juvenile and Family Court Judges and has begun piloting the curriculum in diverse communities across the U.S.
<http://www.bwjp.org>
- Mississippi Domestic Homicide and Risk Reduction Project
 - To offer support for Mississippi advocacy agencies in developing interagency relationships to better respond to abuse victims, BWJP created the MS Domestic Homicide and Risk Reduction Project and recruited three programs in Mississippi to participate. BWJP then conducted site visits, provided assessments, trained on danger assessments, and assisted agencies in developing plans to increase interagency collaborations to address domestic homicide and reduce risk in domestic violence cases.

<http://www.bwjp.org>

- Reentry and Expert Witness Webinar Series

NCDBW hosted two webinar series focusing on: 1) survivors who are reentering their communities after being incarcerated and 2) the use of experts as witnesses in domestic violence and sexual assault cases. Some of the reentry webinars featured formerly incarcerated parents and their children and analyzed their challenges; the impact of reentry and reunification on the child welfare system; and reentry coaching programs.

- Appellate Cases and Issues and Amicus Briefs

- BWJP monitors appellate cases involving domestic violence. Both BWJP and NCDBW network with, and provide training and technical assistance to, attorneys representing domestic violence survivors in appellate litigation.
- BWJP joined an amicus brief involving the one-year time limit to file a Hague petition. NCDBW submitted an amicus brief in support of Michelle Byrom, a battered woman on death row in Mississippi.

National Health Resource Center on Domestic Violence

www.futureswithoutviolence.org/health

The National Health Resource Center on Domestic Violence (HRCDV) supports health care practitioners, administrators and systems, domestic violence experts, survivors, and policy makers at all levels as they work to improve health care providers' and health care systems' responses to domestic violence. The HRCDV supports leaders in the field through education and response programs, advocacy and technical assistance. The HRCDV also offers free, culturally responsive materials and in-person trainings appropriate for a variety of public and private health professions, settings and departments.

Accomplishments

- Compendium of State and U.S. Territory Statutes and Policies on Domestic Violence and Health Care

- Updating and expanding the HRCDV's 2010 Compendium of State and U.S. Territory Statutes and Policies on Domestic Violence and Health Care (formerly the 2001 State by State Legislative Report Card on Health Care Laws and Domestic Violence), the HRCDV released its 2013 edition of the Compendium and included a new chapter entitled: Tribal Codes on Domestic Violence and Promising Programs in Indian Country.

- Pilot Program in Primary Health Care Clinics
 - For this new pilot program, Improving Health Outcomes through Violence Prevention: Addressing Domestic Violence in Primary Health Care Clinics, the HRCDV collaborated with Bureau of Primary Health Care in HHS's Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) to provide technical assistance to three health care centers and to improve primary health care centers' responses to intimate partner violence.
www.nchdv.org and www.futureswithoutviolence.org/nchdv
- Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) Learning Tools
 - The HRCDV developed learning tools on ACEs, including: 1) an e-learning module which features a new safety card and video and presents a universal education strategy to support parents based on a resiliency and strengths-based approach; and 2) a train-the trainer curriculum to address the impact of ACEs on children and parents.

National Center on Domestic Violence, Trauma & Mental Health
www.nationalcenterdvtraumamh.org

The National Center on Domestic Violence, Trauma & Mental Health (NCDVTMH) is committed to developing comprehensive, accessible, and culturally-relevant responses to the range of trauma-related issues faced by domestic violence survivors and their children; to promoting advocacy that is survivor-defined and rooted in principles of social justice; and to eradicating the social and psychological conditions that contribute to interpersonal abuse and violence across the lifespan.

Toward that end, NCDVTMH, focuses its efforts on: 1) promoting dialogue between domestic violence and mental health organizations, policy-makers, and survivor/advocacy groups about the complex intersections of domestic violence, trauma and mental health and current strategies to enhance work in this area; 2) building capacity among local agencies, state domestic violence coalitions, and state mental health systems; and 3) providing recommendations on policies, practices, and collaborative models that will positively impact the lives of survivors and their children, particularly related to trauma and mental health.

Accomplishments

- Training-of-Trainers Program, *Creating Inclusive Trauma-Informed Domestic Violence Services and Organizations
 - NCDVTMH began conducting annual trainings in Chicago (December 2012 and September 2013). They also conducted a special session in July 2013 for the New Mexico Coalition Against Domestic Violence, a state domestic violence coalition that received enhanced capacity-building assistance from NCDVTMH through the Multi-Site Initiative program.

One participant described the Training-of-Trainers program as one that created “light bulb” moments when training participants “recall survivors with whom they have worked whose lives, reactions to the abuse, behavior while in shelter, etc., were direct results of past or ongoing trauma.”

Another participant from a state domestic violence coalition said, “I have had positive feedback even months later from program staff and directors on how much they appreciated the trainings.”

<http://www.nationalcenterdvtraumamh.org/>

- Special Collection: *Trauma-Informed Domestic Violence Services

- NCDVTMH, in collaboration with the NRC DV, developed and launched a three-part collection of resources relevant to domestic violence programs and advocates with implementation commentary. The collection is available on VAWnet.org.

<http://www.nationalcenterdvtraumamh.org/2013/04/announcing-the-trauma-informed-domestic-violence-services-special-collection/>

- A Systematic Review of Trauma-Focused Interventions for Domestic Violence Survivors Report

- NCDVTMH conducted a comprehensive, formal literature review on currently available treatment interventions for survivors of domestic violence, and produced a report entitled, A Systematic Review of Trauma-Focused Interventions for Domestic Violence Survivors. This report is part of a multi-year effort by NCDVTMH to partner with researchers, clinicians, and the domestic violence field to build an evidence base for both trauma-informed work and trauma-specific treatment in the context of domestic violence.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF
JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURT JUDGES

est. 1937

Resource Center on Domestic Violence:
Child Protection and Custody
800-527-3223

www.ncjfcj.org/dept/fvd

The Family Violence Department of the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges provides leadership and assistance to consumers and professionals dealing with the issues of child protection and custody in the context of domestic violence through operation of the Resource Center on Domestic Violence: Child Protection and Custody (Resource Center). The Resource Center provides access to the best possible sources of information and tangible products to those working in the field of domestic violence, child protection, and custody. The Resource Center also provides technical assistance, training, policy development, and other resources that increase safety, promote stability, and enhance the well being of battered parents and their children.

Accomplishments

- 2014 Children's Bureau Child Abuse and Neglect Conference – Domestic Violence Institute: Strengthening Policy, Strengthening Families
 - The Resource Center coordinated a four part Domestic Violence Institute: "Strengthening Policy, Strengthening Families" that guided child welfare workers through the challenges and opportunities presented by the domestic violence provisions in Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA). The sessions offered discussion on specialized social services positions, lessons learned through national efforts to respond to the co-occurrence, the engagement of men of color in the child welfare system, the economic needs of both battered women and low-income men, and trauma-informed care. All of the sessions provided participants with opportunities to discuss both community-specific issues, and to imagine broader responses to domestic violence and child maltreatment. Additional details are available in section IX: Collaborations: A. Child Welfare Agencies.
- Custody Advocacy Curriculum
 - The Resource Center worked with BWJP to develop and pilot a custody advocacy curriculum, which seeks to expand the capacity of domestic violence advocates to respond to domestic violence in the custody system.
- National Child Protection and Custody Technical Assistance and Training
 - In 2013, the Resource Center staff distributed surveys to child welfare liaisons in all states and U.S. territories to identify emerging child protection and custody training and technical assistance needs, including the barriers and successes of collaborative efforts to address co-occurrence. Additionally, the Resource Center facilitated a focus group with domestic violence coalitions about the current state of the field, trends, and training and technical assistance needs.
 - In 2014, the Resource Center convened the 2014 Domestic Violence Coalition Working Group Meeting to discuss the intersection of domestic violence, child protection and custody. It continues to provide ongoing technical assistance and training as well as to develop and distribute specialized resources addressing child protection and custody.

NATIONAL & CULTURALLY-SPECIFIC SPECIAL ISSUE RESOURCE CENTERS

www.api-gbv.org

The Asian Pacific Institute on Gender-Based Violence (API-GBV) is a national training and technical assistance provider, and a clearinghouse on gender violence in Asian, Native Hawaiian, and Pacific Islander communities. It serves as a national network of community members, organizations, service agencies, professionals, researchers, policy makers, and advocates working to eliminate violence against women. API-GBV focuses on analyzing critical issues that inform prevention and intervention of violence against Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander women as part of its strategic agenda to transform programs, communities, and systems. This is achieved by improving the cultural relevancy of services; providing the tools to confront and change gender norms; and conducting research and policy reviews that increase access to systems.

Accomplishments

- “Putting Our Work on the Map” National Summit
 - Three hundred advocates representing 80 community-based organizations and 15 national organizations were trained on a range of critical issues affecting Asian and Pacific Islander populations. The summit showcased the work of community-based organizations across the country and emphasized how their work contributes to changing community norms, building survivor safety, and enhancing well-being.
<http://www.apiidv.org/resources/summit2013.php>
- Advocacy against Domestic Violence and Abusive International Marriages
 - In collaboration with advocates, stakeholders, and community members, API-GBV created a Building Our Futures campaign to end domestic violence and abusive international marriages in Hmong communities. API-GBV distributed a groundbreaking report, Abusive International Marriages: Hmong Advocates Organizing in Wisconsin, and organized a Day of Action which took place in several cities in the U.S. as well as cities in Vietnam, Laos and Thailand.

The National Latin@ Network for Healthy Families and Communities (NLN) exists to advance effective responses to eliminate violence and promote healthy relationships within Latin@ families and communities. Casa de Esperanza has chosen to use “@” in place of the masculine “o” when referring to people or things that are either gender neutral or both masculine and feminine in make-up; this reflects the organization’s commitment to gender inclusion and recognizes the important contributions that both men and women make to Latino/Latina communities. The NLN addresses four primary issues: increasing access for Latin@s experiencing domestic violence through training and technical assistance; producing culturally relevant tools for advocates and practitioners; conducting culturally relevant research that explores the context in which Latin@ families experience violence; and interjecting the lived realities of Latin@s into policy efforts to better support Latin@ families. The NLN is led by five national leaders and supported by three national steering committees in policy, technical assistance, and research.

Accomplishments

- Special Collection: *Domestic Violence in Latin@ Communities
 - Casa de Esperanza developed a special collection on VAWnet which provides tools and resources to address domestic violence in Latin@ communities. The special collection: 1) introduces the framework and philosophy of Casa de Esperanza as a foundation to its trauma-informed work; 2) defines relevant terms within the context of domestic violence in Latin@ communities from a social justice perspective; 3) provides culturally-specific resources and tools that address domestic violence within the Latin@ context related to policy, research and service provision; and 4) offers a list of Latin@ specific organizations addressing violence against women in the U.S.

<http://www.vawnet.org/special-collections/DVlatin@.php>

- Engaging Men and Boys Toolkit and Te Invito Campaign

- The Engaging Men and Boys toolkit is a collection of resources and materials for individuals and organizations to increase awareness and engage Latino men and boys in preventing domestic violence. The Te Invito campaign was developed to engage local Latino leaders in speaking directly to other Latino men. Materials were created for locally based organizations to invite Latino men to be a part of their domestic violence prevention efforts.

The Institute on Domestic Violence in the African American Community (IDVAAC) is an organization focused on the unique circumstances and life experiences of African Americans as they seek resources and remedies related to the victimization and perpetration of domestic violence in their community. IDVAAC recognizes the impact and high correlation of intimate partner violence to child abuse, elder maltreatment, and community violence. IDVAAC's mission is to enhance society's understanding of and ability to end violence in the African American community.

Accomplishments

- IDVAAC Radio Show

- IDVAAC engaged the community through its weekly national radio show (funded through HHS) on Blog Talk Radio that began in September 2013 to address emerging issues as they relate to violence in the Black community. Recent radio show programs have focused on fatherhood, teen dating violence, children, engagement of men, and faith and domestic violence.

<http://www.blogtalkradio.com/idvaac>

- Community Awareness

- IDVAAC convened community members and advocates for dialogue and/or training on a myriad of specialized domestic violence issues such as: domestic violence in Muslim and African communities; faith-based approaches to addressing domestic violence; evidence based, trauma-informed and culturally-specific strategies to address domestic violence in Black communities; and the impact of relevant national policies. In 2014, IDVAAC operated three booths at the Mac and Third Homelessness Awareness Event, which more than 30,000 people from the Detroit, Michigan area attended. At the event, IDVAAC reached out to 4,532 people on issues related to domestic violence, such as healing, safety, homelessness, and HIV.

B. State Domestic Violence Coalition Formula Grants

Each state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands have a federally-recognized Domestic Violence Coalition. The coalitions serve as information clearinghouses and coordinate statewide domestic violence programs, outreach and activities. They provide technical assistance to local domestic violence programs (most of which are funded through subawards from FVPSA state, territorial and tribal formula grants) and encourage appropriate responses to domestic violence within their respective states and territories. The coalitions also partner with state and territorial formula grantees to accomplish state- and territory-wide needs assessments and participate in the planning and monitoring of the distribution of state and territorial FVPSA formula grants.

Coalition activities cover a spectrum of intersecting social issues, which may include economic empowerment and advocacy; anti-oppression; homelessness; human trafficking; HIV/AIDS; and criminal and civil justice. Notable activities include: collaboration with and technical assistance for homeless service providers to screen for domestic violence and ensure victim safety; coordination and cross-training with organizations serving families of homicide victims to address grief and trauma; and, systems reform efforts and statewide planning with crime victim service organizations, and local, state, and tribal governments.

Each state and territorial domestic violence coalition received 1/56th of the total allotment for state/territory domestic violence coalitions (10 percent of the FVPSA appropriation). In FY 2013, each state and territorial domestic violence coalition received $216,474 per coalition, for a total appropriation of $12,122,525. In FY 2014, each state and territorial domestic violence coalition received $238,430 per coalition, for a total appropriation of $13,352,100. Snapshots of the coalitions' work are highlighted below:

Program Reflections: Connecticut

"With the support of FVPSA, the Connecticut Coalition Against Domestic Violence (CCADV) was able to conduct a statewide needs assessment. "An Analysis of Service Utilization and Perceptions from the Field," will be employed by CCADV to conduct critical strategic planning as we work to strengthen Connecticut's response to some 60,000 victims annually." - Chief Executive Officer of the Connecticut Coalition Against Domestic Violence

Program Snapshots

- The Illinois Coalition Against Domestic Violence (ICADV) maintained a toll-free number, in addition to email, for member domestic violence service providers to seek technical assistance needed by their agencies. In addition, ICADV provided on-site technical assistance on a variety of services such as safety planning, confidentiality, program development and outreach to underserved populations. In FY 2014, ICADV responded to over 1,072 requests for technical assistance from member domestic violence agencies via email and telephone; provided 62 on-site visits for the purpose of monitoring funded projects and providing intensive technical assistance; and answered over 80 requests for technical assistance from other entities in the state.

- The Louisiana Coalition Against Domestic Violence (LCADV) monitored the Louisiana Domestic Violence Hotline. LCADV staff acted as a liaison between LCADV member domestic violence programs and the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS), maintained records of all calls received via the hotline, resolved all technical difficulties, and performed necessary maintenance. Each month, LCADV staff submitted a report to DCFS, which included the total number of calls, the total length of calls, and the origin of calls received via the hotline. During FY 2014, the Louisiana Domestic Violence Hotline received a total of 4,392 in-state calls, totaling 17,519 minutes, and a total of 504 state-to-state calls, totaling 1,118 minutes.
- The Missouri Coalition Against Domestic and Sexual Violence (MCADSV) conducted a diversity networking project to connect coalition member programs to culturally-specific organizations in their communities. This process was facilitated through MCADSV's regional meeting structure. MCADSV staff conducted outreach to culturally-specific organizations and coordinated the meeting logistics. This project was hugely successful as many member programs were able to link to new partners, resources, and make entries to underserved communities. MCADSV staff also made extensive efforts to reach out to urban tribes and other Native American groups in Missouri.
- The Idaho Coalition Against Sexual & Domestic Violence (IDVSA) conducted outreach efforts to immigrant and refugee communities. It established a new relationship with the Mujeres Unidas de Idaho (which became a member of the IDVSA); the Idaho Community Action Network, which is focused on immigration rights; and the Community Council of Idaho, which is the largest nonprofit serving Latinos in the state. The coalition also had a number of projects working with Immigrant and Refugee Communities including the Idaho Network to End Domestic Violence & Sex Trafficking Against Immigrants and Refugees. The network met quarterly and worked to raise awareness about, and increase access to, services for immigrant and refugee victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, and sex trafficking. IDVSA also has a very successful prevention initiative. Its Center for Healthy Teen Relationships (CHTR) promotes healthy relationship skills as a way to prevent adolescent relationship abuse and sexual assault by engaging and educating young people, parents/caregivers, and adult influencers, promoting positive social norms, and developing policy to create sustainability of the program. In 2014, the CHTR released the Idaho Model Secondary School Policy Adolescent Relationship Abuse and Sexual Assault Prevention and Response (see <http://www.idvsa.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/06/Idaho-Model-School-Policy.pdf>). School districts will assist schools in implementing these guidelines as part of existing policies and related efforts to address social and emotional health and well-being, bullying, cyber-bullying, harassment, sexual harassment, or other forms of violence among students.

- The Arkansas Coalition Against Domestic Violence completed the roll out of its safety app called iHOPE. iHOPE is an easy-to-use smartphone app for both Apple and Android designed to promote domestic peace and prevent violence before it happens. It provides users with safety tools to plan their activities and notify their trusted friends, family members, and other contacts before, or when, they need their help. Whether used as a safety precaution, a safety status update, or when users need help from their designated contacts, iHOPE provides useful safety features and support resources. For example, the My Support feature allows users to create a contact list of up to five designated family members, friends or other contacts; the My Safety feature allows users to create an alert that uses a timer before users find themselves in a potentially vulnerable situation; and the I'm Safe feature allows users to easily let their contacts know they are safe.

Program Reflections: Virginia

"Please don't lose the momentum of these trainings. I've learned so much, I just hope my agency is ready for me (smile). Empowered!" -Participant of the Virginia Sexual and Domestic Violence Action Alliance's Dismantling Racism training, a project funded by FVPSA to ensure that services are accessible and appropriate for all victims.

VI. Developing Leadership and Capacity in Underserved Communities

A. Discretionary Grants to Expand Leadership Opportunities within the Domestic Violence Field for Members of Underrepresented Groups

FVPSA's "Expanding Leadership Opportunities within the Domestic Violence Field for Members of Underrepresented Groups" is a 5-year project (FY11-FY15) designed to extend and strengthen ongoing national outreach efforts to serve all victims of domestic violence by enhancing, supporting and promoting the presence of leaders of underrepresented groups and aspiring allies. Through this award, the Women of Color Network (WOCN), a project of the NRCDV/Pennsylvania Coalition Against Domestic Violence, developed the first federally funded leadership academy within the domestic violence field.

More specifically, two 18-month leadership academies were offered in Minnesota, New Jersey, Vermont, Arizona, and California. The academies provided face-to-face training, webinars, social networking, and outreach to state, local, and tribal programs. A curriculum was also developed as a training tool. Contributors included immigrant, tribal, racial and ethnic minorities, LGBTQ, disabled, and deaf and hard of hearing communities. The first phase of the project was evaluated at the end of FY 2014 by using an assessment instrument that compared the participants' self-assessments to the project goals. Highlighted below are some of the noteworthy outcomes:

- Job Changes Attributed to the Leadership Academy
 - 83 percent received more job responsibilities
 - 41.6 percent received a promotion
- Professional Outcomes Attributed to the Leadership Academy
 - Increased self-confidence
 - Acquired new skills
 - More active in leadership

- More active in mentoring
- Increased professional opportunities
- Promotion
- Transfer Job Skills – 92 percent reported skills learned from a variety of workshops including:
 - Caucus development
 - Community building
 - Fostering diverse and emerging leadership
 - Grant writing
 - Trauma-informed care
 - Outreach to underrepresented groups
- Non-Job Related Outcomes – 75 percent reported changes in:
 - Community activism/outreach
 - Greater cultural awareness
 - Larger social support network

B. Supporting Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, and Questioning Communities: LGBTQ Capacity Building and Demonstration Grant Program

In FY 2013, a $325,000 demonstration grant entitled: Increasing Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender and Questioning (LGBTQ) Service Accessibility through Organizational Capacity Building, Cultural Competence and Participatory Research and Action, was awarded to the Northwest Network of Bisexual, Transgender, Lesbian and Gay Survivors of Abuse (NW Network, <http://nwnetwork.org/who-we-are/>) in Seattle, Washington.

Founded in 1987 by lesbian survivors of battering, the NW Network seeks to end abuse in diverse LGBTQ communities. Through advocacy, organizing and education, they continue to increase community supports for the self-determination and safety of LGBTQ survivors of domestic and dating violence. The intent of the grant program is to expand the capacity of both “mainstream” domestic violence organizations and LGBTQ-specific organizations to more effectively identify and address the unique needs of LGBTQ intimate partner violence victims. Over the course of the three year project period, the grant will leverage the knowledge of experts, assess the current state of literature on working with LGBTQ survivors of domestic violence and identify recommendations for policy, practices, and future resources needed to effectively serve LGBTQ survivors.

Through the use of FVPSA funding, the NW Network’s LGBTQ Learning Center on Domestic Violence has:

- Convened a National Steering Committee of researchers, practitioners, and advocates to conduct an evidence-based literature review, including the identification of best and promising practices, supporting services for LGBTQ victims and survivors of intimate partner violence in shelter-based and non-residential settings, and LGBTQ-specific organizations;
- Supported FVPSA grantees in implementing the LGBTQ Accessibility Policy included in all FY 2013 FVPSA-funded grants;

- Conducted a comprehensive review of theoretical and empirically-based literature examining the needs, experiences, and current interventions used to assist LGBTQ victims of domestic violence; and
- Developed a process to inform the creation of a “Blueprint”—a document providing accessible and actionable recommendations on practice, LGBTQ specific trauma-informed practice, research, policy, and technical assistance and training.

C. Expanding Trauma-informed Approaches: Culturally-specific Interventions: Addressing the Needs of Culturally-specific Communities Through Trauma Services

In FY 2013, through a partnership with DOJ’s the Office on Violence Against Women, seven organizations serving culturally-specific communities were each awarded $185,714 to expand existing programs to incorporate trauma-specific services for adults and children impacted by domestic violence. Each of these grantees are:

- Offering enhanced culturally-specific, trauma-informed, and evidenced-informed programming to reduce traumatic stress reactions for victims of domestic violence and their children who are from diverse and historically marginalized communities;
- Implementing interventions, policies, practices, and collaborative models to improve services for individuals, children, and families who have experienced trauma and are exhibiting trauma symptoms while accessing domestic violence programs, tribal programs, or culturally-specific community-based programs;
- Evaluating the effectiveness of trauma-informed and evidence-informed interventions for victims of domestic violence and their children who are from diverse and historically marginalized communities thus contributing to the evidence base for culturally relevant services;
- Disseminating research findings, protocols, and effective approaches on providing culturally-specific, trauma-informed programming to experts and service providers to raise awareness of their unique domestic violence programs, state domestic violence coalitions, tribes, tribal organizations, government agencies, and community-based organizations; and
- Offering training and technical assistance to staff, community partners, domestic violence programs, and other community-based organizations regarding culturally-relevant, trauma-informed screening/assessment and programming.

During FY 2014, these grantees established collaborative partnerships with other service providers in their communities through advisory groups and memoranda of understanding. Moreover, the grantees researched and identified trauma-focused screening and assessment tools to use within the targeted client populations served.

Seven Culturally-Specific Trauma Services Programs:

Boat People SOS, Inc. (<http://www.bpsos.org/mainsite/en/>) examined their existing trauma-informed approach, Survivors of Trauma Empowerment Program, for its usefulness with Vietnamese refugees and immigrant survivors and families within their Communities Against Domestic Violence Program. The program will be replicable for its sites in Falls Church, Virginia; Biloxi, Mississippi; and Houston, Texas.

The Domestic Violence Action Center

(<http://www.domesticviolenceactioncenter.org/about-us>) launched their planning process which included a needs assessment to identify new approaches for serving Native Hawaiian survivors and their children. They have successfully convened a Hui (“group”) of community leaders, context experts, cultural navigators, and survivors to refine the program outcomes, evaluate, and recommend client assessment tools and interventions, and assure program alignment with community and family safety.

The Gay Men’s Domestic Violence Project (<http://www.glbtdvp.org/>) engaged in a rigorous organizational assessment to identify what modifications were needed as a part of their existing policies and interventions with gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, and questioning (LGBTQ) survivors within Massachusetts. The program also began the process of compiling a literature review on current studies and papers examining the multilayered oppressions of GLBTQ survivors.

South Bay Community Services (<http://www.southbaycommunitycenter.com/>) began implementing SafeCare with Latina parents at-risk for or those who were reported for child maltreatment and have histories of domestic violence. SafeCare is an evidence based program home visitation module that lasts 18-20 weeks. Some of the families will also take part in an additional module on Healthy Relationships and Motivational Interviewing (also an evidence based program).

The Southcentral Foundation (<https://www.southcentralfoundation.com/>) conducted comprehensive review of 28 child trauma screening tools and selected the Child PTSD scale and the Pediatric Symptom Scale checklist for their implementation efforts. In addition to reviewing adult trauma assessment tools, the Southcentral Foundation has also adapted current tools to include more Alaskan specific trauma scenarios. These efforts coincided with the expansion of their Learning Circles programs for both youth and adults.

The Texas Muslim Women’s Foundation (<http://tmwf.org/>) developed a culturally-sensitive organizational assessment tool to examine their organization’s interventions and for other organizations serving survivors from Muslim communities. The tool incorporated specific types of trauma that Muslim communities experience in addition to domestic violence.

The University of Louisville Research Foundation (<http://louisville.edu/>) collaborated with the La Casita, a human services program for Spanish-speaking refugees and immigrants, and The Center for Women and Families to conduct a needs assessment and examine already existing curricula. The CHOICES curriculum, developed and implemented at The Center for Women and Families will be translated and adapted as a response to the findings from the needs assessment.

VII. Breaking the Cycle: Prioritizing Children and Youth

A. Enhanced Services for Children and Youth Exposed to Domestic Violence Discretionary Grants

In FY 2013, the final year of a three-year grant program, $850,000 grants were awarded to four statewide capacity-building projects and one national technical assistance provider to expand services for children and youth exposed to domestic violence. The five grantees are expanding the network of support for developing evidence-based interventions for children, youth and parents exposed to domestic violence; and building national implementation strategies that will assist local improvements in domestic violence programs and community-based interventions.

Four Statewide Capacity Building Projects:

The grantees represent the following States: Alaska, Idaho, New Jersey, and Wisconsin.

- The Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault improved collaboration between services and enhanced responses to Alaska's families by addressing the lack of coordination between domestic violence agencies, tribal partners and child welfare systems.

The Safe Growing Together Project examined what domestic violence programs could do to enhance relationships between battered mothers and their children, especially those from under-represented communities or involved in the child welfare system. This project included cross-education and development of an integrated training curriculum and policies.

This project also included community-based, multidisciplinary teams in four Alaskan communities: Dillingham, Fairbanks, Juneau, and Kodiak.

- The Idaho Coalition Against Sexual and Domestic Violence launched the Resilient Families Idaho initiative. This initiative used counselors and advocates trained in two evidence-based programs, Child Parent Psychotherapy and Trauma-Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy to provide trauma-informed, developmentally sensitive parent-child services to promote resiliency and thriving, life-long healthy relationships in survivors of domestic violence and their children.

Resilient Families Idaho's partners integrated these parent-child practices and services into their overall organizational structures and built bridges in their communities to increase the most comprehensive child and parent-child centered approach to creating healthy futures.

- The New Jersey Coalition for Battered Women expanded an established model program for children who have been exposed to domestic violence. The Peace: A Learned Solution (PALS)³⁹ program provided children ages 3 through 12 with creative arts therapy to help them heal from exposure to domestic violence.

The PALS Expansion project worked with 11 New Jersey counties to ensure that the therapeutic intervention being provided was evidence-based by conducting a fidelity scale and outcome evaluation. A pilot PALS program was also conducted for adolescents, ages 13 through 17, to gauge the effectiveness of the creative arts therapy with teens exposed to domestic violence.

- The Wisconsin Coalition Against Domestic Violence launched the Safe Together Project, to increase the capacity of Wisconsin domestic violence programs, particularly those serving under-represented or culturally-specific populations; and to support non-abusing parents and mitigate the impact of exposure to domestic violence on their children. One of the projects was a Native American culturally-specific program called Discovery Dating through a partnership with the Wise Women Gathering Place. This curriculum-based program engaged youth and adults to explore and clarify their goals and values, and discern character traits of others, thereby developing criteria and skills for better decision-making; the program also was evaluated.

National Technical Assistance & Resource Development:

Futures Without Violence served as the national technical assistance support provider for the above-mentioned grants to enhance services to children and youth. During the project period, Futures Without Violence:

- Conducted a national scan and literature review of existing evidence-based interventions and promising practices for children and youth exposed to domestic violence and other traumas. This literature review⁴⁰ included a review of both research and experiential evidence related to services provided in multiple settings for children and youth exposed to domestic violence and other trauma.
- Developed evaluation measures to be used by domestic violence programs to support future documentation and evaluation of their work with children, youth and their mothers; and developed a framework and national recommendations for children's programs.
- Worked with a national leadership committee comprised of state coalitions, academics, activists, federal partners, and national organizations.
- Produced guidance for local domestic violence programs to assess their current capacities to serve children and youth and offered guidance on enhancing programmatic efforts.
- Provided technical assistance and training to four state coalitions funded under this program.
- Developed an online resource and capacity-building website, www.promisingfutureswithoutviolence.org, to assist domestic violence programs in enhancing their services for children, youth, and their mothers experiencing domestic violence. The website includes:
 - A searchable database of evidence-based interventions and promising practices for serving children and youth exposed to domestic violence;
 - Strategies for strengthening program readiness and capacity to deliver developmentally appropriate, trauma-informed and effective programming;
 - Information and resources on protective factors, resilience, and interventions that strengthen the mother-child bond;
 - Guidance on program evaluation and adaptation;
 - Testimonials highlighting states and programs doing innovative work;
 - Resources and guidance on working with culturally diverse families;
 - Training curriculums, research articles, and other tools for advocates; and,
 - Resources for parents and caregivers.

VIII. Working to Prevent Violence Before it Occurs: DELTA FOCUS Program

In FY 2013 and FY 2014, DELTA grants were administered as the Focusing on Outcomes for Communities United within States (DELTA FOCUS) Program, indicating a specific programmatic focus on “primary prevention” – preventing violence before it happens. Like many public health problems, intimate partner violence is not simply an individual problem. It is a problem rooted in community and societal norms. FVPSA authorizes distribution of federal funds to support coordinated community responses that address intimate partner violence.

⁴⁰ Literature review was performed by Dr. Linda Chamberlain, Ph.D., M.P.H.

A coordinated community response is an organized effort to prevent and respond to intimate partner violence in a community. It typically coordinates the work of diverse service sectors, such as organizations involved in violence prevention, youth development, education, public health, and faith-based initiatives. In FY 2013 and FY 2014, CDC's DELTA FOCUS Program funded 10 state domestic violence coalitions to implement and evaluate domestic violence prevention strategies at the state and local level, including providing prevention-focused training, technical assistance, and financial support to 18 local coordinated community responses within those states.

DELTA FOCUS emphasizes strategies that work to change the environments and conditions in which intimate partner violence takes place. For instance, some grantees are working to change school climates to promote healthy relationships and encourage appropriate bystander behavior among adolescents. Others are working to change community norms about violence via traditional and social media outlets. Grantees were located in Alaska, California, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Indiana, Michigan, North Carolina, Ohio, and Rhode Island. Through the DELTA FOCUS program, state domestic violence coalitions have established effective working relationships with key stakeholders and organizations in their states, resulting in programmatic and policy successes. Examples include:

- The California Partnership to End Domestic Violence (CPEDV) worked to prevent teen dating violence within the education system. In FY 2013-2014, CPEDV and the California School Board Association released "Promoting Healthy Relationships for Adolescents: Board Policy Considerations" for governing boards and schools. The report focuses on efforts to support healthy relationships, prevent teen dating violence before it occurs, and responding appropriately when dating violence occurs among students. Policies suggested included: clearly communicating that the school community stands for healthy relationships and does not tolerate violence of any kind – including abuse in a dating relationship; utilizing Local Control and Accountability Plans, comprehensive safety plans, student handbooks and/or other district and school documents to establish the prevention of dating abuse as a priority; and incorporating curriculum on dating abuse into the health education programs and other appropriate courses.
http://www.cpedv.org/CSBA_Partnership_Healthy_Relationships_Policy_Brief_8_2014.pdf
- The Ohio Domestic Violence Network (ODVN) engaged three colleges/universities -- a private faith-based university, a historically black university, and a trade school -- to implement a campus climate survey and prevention readiness assessment in early 2015. To successfully engage these institutions in this work, ODVN built strategic partnerships, conducted needs assessments, and completed all Institutional Review Board and other requirements necessary to prepare for the upcoming surveys. Results from the surveys and assessments will be used to select targeted intimate partner violence prevention strategies that can be implemented on Ohio campuses. Implementation will occur in 2015-2017, with a follow-up climate survey being implemented by late 2017 to measure changes in campus climate.
- The Idaho Coalition Against Sexual and Domestic Violence (ICASDV) focused on changing organizational practices of adolescent health care providers to ensure they are addressing teen dating violence. In addition to training adolescent health care providers to more effectively have conversations with adolescents about healthy relationships, CASDV is also working with health care providers to change organizational practices and procedures to ensure teen dating violence is addressed as a standard part of their practice.

IX. Collaborations

The FVPSA program has spent years building partnerships with federal agencies to address the pervasive impacts of domestic and dating violence as well as trauma across the lifespan. Throughout FY 2013 and FY 2014, the FVPSA program led several partnerships within HHS to ensure federal programs and grantees are able to:

- Recognize domestic violence and its impact;
- React appropriately, with trauma-informed strategies; and,
- Refer victims and their children to appropriate assistance.

In 2014, the FVPSA program partnered with seven ACF agencies to release multiple information memoranda during Domestic Violence Awareness Month reaching over 65,000 people. Every ACF component has an important role in helping families struggling with domestic violence. The information memoranda provide ACF agencies and grantees with connections to domestic violence training and resources, and promote partnerships with domestic violence programs. Participating ACF agencies included: Administration of Native Americans, Office of Refugee Resettlement, Office of Child Support Enforcement, Office of Community Services, Office of Family Assistance, and the Children's Bureau. To review the information memoranda completed in FY 14 and released broadly in October 2014, visit:

<http://www.acf.hhs.gov/programs/fysb/resource/dv-information-memorandum-initiative>.

A. Child Welfare Agencies

Within the Administration on Children, Youth and Families, the FVPSA program and the Children's Bureau (CB) have collaborated on the co-occurrence of domestic violence and child maltreatment. The strategic focus of this partnership includes the national promotion of cross-system, trauma-informed, and domestic violence informed best practices. Notable efforts include:

- Training child welfare agencies about trauma-informed strategies for working with children, youth, and abused parents experiencing domestic violence. In 2014, the FVPSA program partnered with CB to host the Domestic Violence Institute: Strengthening Policy, Strengthening Families (DV Institute); this event occurred at the 19th National Conference on Child Abuse and Neglect (NCCAN) in New Orleans. At this national conference, more than 2,000 live and virtual participants reflected on 40 years of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) in an exciting mix of prevention and intervention, policy and practice, and research and innovation. Learning clusters addressed protective factors, trauma, resiliency, partnerships, engagement, workforce development, collective impact, and systems change.

FVPSA's DV Institute guided participants through the challenges and opportunities addressed in the domestic violence provisions of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), including lessons learned through national efforts to respond to the co-occurrence, the engagement of men of color in the child welfare system, the economic needs of both battered women and low-income men, and trauma-informed care. The DV Institute was presented in four parts: 1) CAPTA and research on specialized positions, 2) innovative collaborative strategies that engage key stakeholders and practitioners to respond to co-occurrence, 3) strategies for working with men and women of color within the child welfare system, and 4) working with families exposed to multiple and on-going trauma.

- Promoting cross-system dialogues that discuss system barriers and safety challenges for victims of domestic violence and their children. In 2013, the FVPSA program partnered with CB to host a national cross system dialogue entitled: A Family's Experience: A Multidisciplinary Dialogue to Improve Outcomes in Intimate Partner Violence and Child Abuse and Neglect Cases. This webcast event included a 4-minute video clip, The Story of Rachel, that focused on intimate partner violence and the engagement of multiple and complex systems.

Speakers addressed the innovative policies and programs at the nexus of child welfare and domestic violence, emphasizing practices that support safety, minimize risk, and promote resilience. Participants reviewed and responded to a real-life case example, and had the opportunity to ask questions and share promising practices.

- Increasing the availability of technical assistance tools and resources available to child welfare agencies on the co-occurrence of domestic violence and child maltreatment with an emphasis on working with culturally-specific communities and supporting abused parents. In FY 2013 and FY 2014, the FVPSA program partnered with CB to raise awareness about FVPSA-funded resource centers that provide specialized expertise, training, and technical assistance on these issues.

B. Child Support Agencies

The Office of Child Support Enforcement (OCSE) and the FVPSA program partnered to coordinate training, policy, and programmatic efforts to address domestic violence in the child support context. Joint efforts focused on promoting training and technical assistance to increase domestic violence screening, improve caseworker understanding of a range of options for safe enforcement of protection orders, and increasing partnerships with local domestic violence programs. Notable efforts include:

- In 2013, the FVPSA program and FVPSA grantees participated in OCSE's Domestic Violence Roundtable. This roundtable featured discussions on domestic violence. Participants identified methods and strategies for addressing domestic violence in child support cases where parenting time is also being established. Visit the following website to read the roundtable report: <http://www.acf.hhs.gov/programs/css/resource/roundtable-on-domestic-violence-center-for-policy-research>.
- Increasing the availability of technical assistance tools and resources for child support agencies promoting the awareness of families impacted by domestic violence who access child support resources.

C. Health Care Providers

The FVPSA program partnered with the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), and the HRSA Office on Women's Health to broaden health care providers' awareness of domestic violence as a public health concern focusing on the long-term health impact of domestic violence and reproductive coercion. Notable efforts include:

- Promoting dialogues with domestic violence advocates and community/public health agencies regarding reproductive coercion, domestic violence, rapid repeat pregnancies, and safety challenges for victims of domestic violence and their children. In FY 2014, the FVPSA program entered into an inter-agency agreement with HRSA's Office on Women's Health and the Bureau of Primary Health Care to fund an intimate partner violence screening and counseling pilot project. The project was implemented by the National Health Resource Center on Domestic Violence (HRCDV), a FVPSA grantee who will be responsible for training, partnership development, and evaluating this pilot project.

HRCDV's existing intimate partner violence screening and counseling tools and strategies will be used to provide training and technical assistance to the three health centers involved in Phase I to implement practice changes at multiple levels and create stronger and more formal relationships between health centers and community-based domestic violence programs. This project was designed to assist the health centers in implementing intimate partner violence screening and counseling as part of systematic well-woman care thereby improving long term health outcomes for female patients.

- Increasing the availability of technical assistance tools and resources available to health care providers to promote the awareness of health impacts of domestic violence. In FY 2013, HRCDV launched an online toolkit for advocates and providers to increase knowledge, provide frequently asked questions and resources for helping survivors access health care and trauma-informed support from medical providers. This website is Health Cares about IPV at: www.healthcaresaboutipv.org.
- Promoting dialogues with domestic violence advocates, community/public health agencies, and researchers regarding special considerations for assessing and responding to domestic violence in healthcare settings. In 2013, FVPSA partnered with the Coordinating Committee on Women's Health to host the Intimate Partner Violence Screening and Counseling: Research Symposium at the National Institutes of Health. The goals of the symposium were to inform gaps in research on screening and counseling for intimate partner violence in primary health care settings and to shape research priorities. The ultimate goal is to promote effective strategies for health care practitioners to screen and counsel for intimate partner violence.

D. Other Collaborative Efforts

In addition to administering the national network of nearly 1,600 FVPSA-funded domestic violence programs, state domestic violence coalitions, national resource centers, and the National Domestic Violence Hotline, FVPSA division staffers serve as partners and leaders to other federal agencies in a number of policy and programming initiatives, both within HHS and throughout the federal government. Activities include:

Tribal & Interagency Workgroups

In FY 2013 and FY 2014, the FVPSA Program continued its participation in several tribal-focused working groups:

- The Tribal Justice, Safety and Wellness Working Group (TJSW). Since December 2006, the DOJ and its federal partners have worked steadily to respond to tribal needs through a series of TJSW consultation, training and technical assistance sessions held bi-annually across the country. These sessions address issues of public safety, criminal justice, health and welfare (including domestic violence), economic development, safe housing, and safe communities.
- The Health and Human Services Tribal Violence Workgroup collaborates to address safety and wellness issues in tribal communities; establish joint priorities across agencies; share technical assistance resources; and connect health resources and services with domestic violence programs on the national and local levels. The workgroup is comprised of the Indian Health Service, HRSA, and ACF.

Federal Interagency Working Groups

FVPSA staff continued participation in a number of senior-level interagency working groups and projects in FY 2013 and FY 2014, including:

- Interagency Workgroup on Violence Against Women, Office of the Vice President. The FVPSA Program is a member of this workgroup. FVPSA collaborates on projects and strategic planning to advance women's health as it relates to the prevention of gender-based violence and the enhancement of support services and resources for victims of intimate partner violence.
- Interagency Workgroup on Women and Trauma. The FVPSA program is a member of the Women and Trauma Federal Partners Committee, launched on April 1, 2009. The Committee first developed as a work group within the Federal Partnership on Mental Health Transformation, and was established by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration to take aggressive actions to develop policy and practice in many priority areas, including suicide prevention, employment, women, and youth in transition from school to work.
- US Department of Health and Human Services Violence against Women (VAW) Steering Committee. The FVPSA program co-chairs the Committee. Established in 1996 to strategically focus departmental collaboration on violence against women and girls, the VAW Steering Committee is comprised of senior-level representatives from diverse agencies and offices throughout the Department. By exploring and promoting the intersections of research, education, and training, the Steering Committee members build linkages with colleagues across the Department to improve responses to violence against women and girls.
- White House Federal Inter-Agency Working Group Addressing the Intersection of HIV/AIDS, Violence Against Women and Girls, and Gender-Related Health Disparities. Pursuant to recommendations made by this work group, increased collaborations across the federal government and partnerships with FVPSA grantees, as well as others, the working group aims to: improve health and wellness for women by screening for intimate partner violence and HIV; improve outcomes for women in HIV care by addressing violence and trauma; address certain contributing factors that increase the risk of violence for women and girls living with HIV; expand public outreach, education, and prevention efforts regarding HIV and violence against women and girls; and support research to understand the scope of the intersection of HIV/AIDS and violence against women and girls, and develop effective interventions.⁴¹
- Ending Family Homelessness. In February 2014, the Interagency Working Group to End Family Homelessness established the Domestic Violence Subgroup co-chaired by the FVPSA program and the Office on Violence Against Women. The DV Subgroup is charged with enhancing and developing policy recommendations, programming, and technical assistance that address the challenges communities face in responding to homeless families affected by domestic violence. The Interagency Working Group to End Family

⁴¹ Addressing the Intersection of HIV/AIDS, Violence Against Women and Girls, and Gender-related Health Disparities, Interagency Federal Working Group Report, September 2013.

Homelessness' domestic violence strategies include:

- Developing guidance and resources on effective strategies for integrating domestic violence support for families across homeless/housing continuums of care;
 - Coordinating across federal agencies to improve access to the continuum of housing options for domestic violence survivors;
 - Increasing training and technical assistance for state and local partners to create better access for homeless families experiencing domestic violence; and
 - Collaborating to make coordinated assessment systems and data collection systems more responsive to the safety needs of victims of domestic violence.
- White House Task Force to Protect Students from Sexual Assault. Established by President Obama in January 2014, this Task Force explores the scope of sexual assault; fosters the development of best practices; and improves the federal government's efforts to prevent and effectively respond to sexual assault on our nation's campuses. FVPSA had been working in collaboration on the efforts of this group during FY 2014 and became an official member of the Task Force in 2015. More specifically, FVPSA contributed to efforts to create a Resource Guide for Campuses and assure that victims services and needs are represented on the www.NotAlone.gov website which is an initiative of the Task Force that compiles information for students, schools, and anyone interested in finding resources on how to respond to and prevent sexual assault.

X. BUILDING ON SUCCESS: NEXT STEPS

Innovation to Increase Safety and Stability, Healing and Long Term Well-being

Since 1984, FVPSA has played a critical role in promoting safety for victims of domestic violence and their families by supporting the safety net of domestic violence shelter and supportive services in over 1,600 domestic violence programs across the country. These programs face an increasing demand for services – for example, in the 2014 National Census of Domestic Violence Services conducted by the National Network to End Domestic Violence, 67,646 victims were served by domestic violence programs in the one day, annual point-in-time survey. Nevertheless, victims made more than 10,000 (10,871) requests for direct services that could not be provided because domestic violence programs lacked the necessary resources and/or capacity to provide these critical services.

We know that the core services offered through FVPSA-funded domestic violence services – shelter, advocacy, support groups and counseling – promote access to safety and community connections that increase long term safety and well-being for survivors and their families. But domestic violence programs are most effective when their services are driven by the needs, culture, circumstances and choices of individual domestic violence survivors. Traditional “core services” such as shelter and support groups may not meet the needs of all survivors and domestic violence programs are evolving to be more flexible and survivor-driven. Examples include:

- Expanding program capacity to offer a range of housing options to meet the needs of domestic violence survivors. The FVPSA program partnered with the Department of Housing and Urban Development, and the DOJ's, Office on Violence Against Women and Office for Victims of Crime to establish a Housing and Domestic Violence Technical Assistance Consortium, a federally coordinated approach to providing resources, program guidance, and training and technical assistance.

This Consortium is expected to improve coordination among domestic violence services, housing, and homeless services and integrate responses to the safety concerns of individuals fleeing domestic violence and their children throughout the crisis-response system. The FVPSA program is working with the Consortium and innovative domestic violence programs to identify and promote effective shelter/housing models that allow some survivors to get the supports they need to prevent homelessness, and to remain in their homes when they can safely do so.

- Evolving to respond to domestic violence victims' help-seeking strategies. In the 20 years that FVPSA has funded the National Domestic Violence Hotline, more than 3.8 million people have received help. In that time, communication technologies have changed and the preferred means for getting information and reaching out for help are increasingly through online resources, websites, chats, and texts. In recent years the Hotline has started offering chat based services and rich web-based educational content on healthy relationships.

Through research on Hotline service patterns and user satisfaction, the FVPSA program will partner with the Hotline to ensure that programming is responsive to the evolving needs of domestic violence victims.

Helping Victims and Families No Matter Where They Seek Help

The FVPSA program will continue to prioritize collaborations with components across ACF and HHS to promote integrated domestic violence prevention and response across all programs. We seek to promote awareness, knowledge, policy and programmatic responses that: recognize domestic violence and the impact on victims and families; respond to victims with a trauma-sensitive response that prioritizes safety; and link victims and their children to the appropriate services.

In FY 2014, the FVPSA program focused on ACF agency communications to grantees and employees about the impact of domestic violence on the people they serve, training resources available in their community, and online to support knowledge building efforts. In the coming years, the FVPSA program will build upon these efforts to deepen partnerships and create lasting change by institutionalizing integrated responses to domestic violence. Key interagency partnerships include comprehensive training and technical assistance, and support for demonstration sites that create policies, protocols, standards of practice and training tools to ensure that health and human service providers have the capacity to respond effectively to abused program participants.

Two examples of this work include:

- Child welfare involved families. Continuing to partner with CB on a child welfare and domestic violence quality improvement center to implement collaborative models in pilot sites to improve safety, permanency and well-being for child welfare involved families experiencing domestic violence. These projects will assist child welfare agencies in strengthening partnerships, policies and procedures with domestic violence programs to offer services that are responsive to victims of domestic violence and their children throughout their engagement with child welfare.

- Healthcare settings. In partnership with HRSA, the FVPSA program will disseminate lessons learned from pilot projects involving the Bureau of Primary Health Care's health centers and local domestic violence programs. The FVPSA program's HRCDV will offer training and technical assistance on an innovative practice model that prepares health care providers to discuss domestic violence with clinic patients and link those who are seeking assistance with domestic violence advocacy services.

Ensuring that All Victims of Domestic Violence Can Access Life-Saving Services

The FVPSA program continues to prioritize the delivery of accessible services for victims of domestic violence from underserved or historically marginalized communities. In order to ensure that every survivor seeking help, regardless of background or circumstance, gender, sexual orientation, ethnicity, or ability, has access to the support they need. In the coming years, FVPSA Resource Centers on Domestic Violence will help programs build their capacity to engage diverse communities, and provide culturally resonant and linguistically accessible services.

Efforts to enhance cultural responsiveness and linguistic accessibility include:

- The FVPSA program's culturally-specific special issue resource centers, in particular, are actively engaged in providing ongoing training and technical assistance to build capacity at the state and local level to support the development of language access plans. More specifically, CASA de Esperanza (Casa) and the Asian Pacific Institute on Gender-Based Violence (API-GBV) are providing technical support and training on the issue of language access planning for domestic violence programs, including delivering training and technical assistance for state domestic violence coalitions; facilitating listening sessions with FVPSA state administrators, coalitions, and culturally-specific community-based organizations; documenting technical assistance needs, implementation successes, and implementation challenges; and drafting recommendations for state-specific capacity building to enhance statewide language access, including the development of language access plans.
- In FY 2016, depending upon availability of funding, FYSB anticipates building upon the work of the LGBTQ Domestic Violence Capacity Building Learning Center by creating the Family Violence Prevention and Services LGBTQ Institute on Intimate Partner Violence. This Institute will be an ongoing resource to offer training and technical assistance, public awareness, research and knowledge building, and policy development to enhance national, state, and local efforts to prevent and address LGBTQ intimate partner violence and expand program capacity to respond to the unique and emerging needs of LGBTQ intimate partner violence survivors.

Focus on Specialized Services for Abused Parents and Their Children

The FVPSA program maintains a strong focus on the needs of parents and children who are exposed to domestic violence through demonstration initiatives focused on children exposed to domestic violence, national resource centers focused on child protection and custody, and the development of resources, such as the website, <http://promising.futureswithoutviolence.org/>, organized and maintained by Futures Without Violence. Going forward, the FVPSA program is expanding upon this work through the establishment of the Specialized Services for Abused Parents and Their Children (SSAPC) grant program funded through a FVPSA set-aside. This grant program will expand the capacity of domestic violence programs to prevent future domestic violence by addressing, in an appropriate manner, the needs of the approximately 15.5 million children who are exposed to domestic violence every year.⁴²

Through this discretionary grant program, FVPSA will fund 13 cooperative agreements (12 demonstration sites and one technical assistance resource center for implementation, training, and evaluation support) to expand FVPSA grantees' capacity to address the needs of children exposed to domestic violence and their abused parents and to build the knowledge base for domestic violence programs focused on children and youth.

While as a nation we seek to prevent violence before it starts, we know that 27 percent of women and 12 percent of men report that domestic violence has affected their health and well-being. The FVPSA program supports essential components of the nation's response to domestic violence - shelter and advocacy programs, state, tribal and national level training and technical assistance, and a National Domestic Violence Hotline. Through this network of support, the FVPSA Program seeks to provide access to safety and support for domestic violence survivors and their families in every community and minimize the impact of violence in the home. By building the capacity of local communities across the country to respond comprehensively to domestic violence, the FVPSA program helps to ensure that whenever a victim of domestic violence reaches out for help, there is someone to answer the call.
