Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Grantees*

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA) is the primary federal funding source dedicated to providing immediate shelter and supportive services for victims of family violence, domestic violence, or dating violence and their dependents. Of the $129,546,700 appropriated to FVPSA in 2012, $12,931,071 in FVPSA formula grants were distributed based on population to 227 Tribes in 26 states. Local tribal domestic violence programs served 40,213 victims of domestic violence and their children in 2011. This is 2.5% of all the clients served by FVPSA-funded programs. Ninety-two percent (92%) of the adults served were female and eight percent (8%) were male.

Services in Tribal Domestic Violence Programs

Local domestic violence programs provide immediate shelter to victims of domestic violence and their dependents. A program may operate its own shelter facility, contract with hotels or access volunteer safe homes to meet the needs of victims. Shelter nights is a count of the number of people who arrive at the shelter and are provided a bed multiplied by the number of nights. The number of unmet requests for shelter is a count of the number of unmet requests for shelter due to programs being at capacity.

The average shelter stay was 29 nights.

The Work of Tribal Domestic Violence Advocates

Paid staff and over 3,000 volunteers in tribal domestic violence programs also provide supportive services for individuals and in groups. Supportive services include crisis intervention, safety planning, support groups, individual counseling, educational services, legal advocacy, personal advocacy, housing advocacy, medical advocacy, information/referral, transportation and home visits. Over 91,500 crisis calls were made to local tribal domestic violence programs for crisis counseling, shelter services or other services. About 95,600 adults and youth received education and prevention presentations.
